

Today in the Quad-Cities Record -7 cold; wind chill -36

Quad-Cityans shivered in record low temperatures this morning and may look forward to continued cold weather today and tonight.

The mercury dropped to 7 degrees below zero by 6:30 a.m. today, accompanied by winds up to 20 miles per hour that resulted in a freeze factor of 36 degrees below zero.

The U. S. Weather Service at St. Louis said high temperatures today are expected to be from 5 to 10 above, falling again tonight to a low of from 0 to 5 degrees.

Today's minus 7-degree reading set a record for this date, compared to a previous record of 6 degrees below zero established in 1885.

The U. S. Weather Service at St. Louis held out some hope for relief during the weekend, however, predicting a high of about 20 on Friday and a warming trend Saturday through Monday that is expected to bring high temperatures in the 40s by Monday.

The plummeting temperatures followed a one-inch snowfall early Wednesday and another two inches of snow throughout the day. Precipitation gauges at the Chain of Rocks locks recorded .65 of an inch of precipitation up to a.m. Wednesday and another .10 of an inch up to 8 a.m. today.

Snow and ice-packed highways and side roads slowed traffic substantially Wednesday. Most highways were reported clear today, although drivers were warned against slick spots on bridges and overpasses.

Service stations and garages were rushed this morning as many motorists encountered difficulties with frozen radiators, frozen gas lines and other problems caused by the cold weather.

Alderman Nonn dies

WALTER F. NONN

Walter F. Nonn, 62, of 2711 Cayuga St., a veteran Granite City alderman of the Fifth Ward, was pronounced dead at his home at 11:45 a.m. Wednesday by Madison County Deputy Coroner William Sternberg.

Mr. Nonn, who had been recuperating from a severe heart attack and subsequent major surgery, was found without signs of life in the living room of his home by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Nonn.

Mrs. Nonn, it was reported, had taken her grandson to school and found her husband on the living room couch when she returned.

Mr. Nonn suffered a heart attack in his home on Friday, Aug. 15, and was taken to Incarnate Word Hospital, St. Louis, where he was placed in the intensive care unit.

Although he returned home to recuperate from that heart attack in late September, Mr. Nonn returned to the hospital for heart surgery on Oct. 9.

Mr. Nonn, a native Granite Cityan, served 32 years as an alderman on the Granite City Council. He was an alderman in Ward Five which includes the West Granite area from which he drew staunch support to elect him to eight consecutive four-year terms.

As a veteran council member with the most years in length of service he played a leading role in most of the city's major projects and often took a controversial stand on top council issues. Because of his tenure on the council, he frequently served as mayor pro-tem during the absence of the mayor.

He was re-elected to his eighth consecutive term in April 1975 without opposition.

Mr. Nonn was employed as a (Continued on Page 25)

Access road sought; senior executive plan

The Tri-Cities Area Chamber of Commerce board of directors voted last night to take steps to encourage development of an access road from the West Pontoon and Nameoki Roads area, skirting the west side of shopping centers and connecting with Fehling Road.

Approving a recommendation of its Highway, Traffic and Transportation Committee, the chamber board agreed to notify public officials of its study findings and to offer help in trying to arrange for acquisition and construction.

Two alternate routes have been reviewed, one linking the Nameoki Road shopping area with Fehling Road and the other connecting with 28th Street or (Continued on Page 4)

Cities worry over revenue

Home rule cities like Granite City have some flexibility in meeting rising costs but Madison and Venice are being squeezed severely by inflation and a static or declining tax base.

These points were among those made by municipal officials in an hour-long review of local cities' financial outlook Wednesday.

The discussion was at the January prayer breakfast of the Community Service Division of the Granite City Rotary Club. Thomas Thebeau presided.

The massive funds needed to complete the repair of existing sewer breaks remain an unsolved problem, but current day-to-day Granite City operating costs can be met for the foreseeable future, Mayor Paul Schuler said.

SNOW AND WIND COMBINATION are creating severe weather conditions in the Quad-Cities. Many hazardous points have developed on area streets in the wake of Wednesday's freezing rain and extensive snowfall. This view to the east up the Broadway viaduct in Venice yesterday afternoon shows westbound motorists attempting to avoid skids as their vehicles descend the traffic overpass.

'Games room' rejected

By HARRY BARNES
Press-Record Staff Writer
After nearly an hour's debate, the Granite City Council Monday night rejected a request by two St. Louis men for permission to open a public "games room" in the former Biederman Furniture building at 3675 Nameoki Road, only to be told that it had no authority to act in the first place.

Council members voted 7 to 3 to concur in a recommendation by Chief of Police Ronald Veizer that the games room—an arcade of coin-operated devices such as pin ball games and electronic video machines—be permitted to open "because the type of persons attracted to such places is not of the best."

Veizer made his recommendation on the proposal after Aldermen Warren Decatur and Everett Morien told the council that they had personally inspected one of three places operated in St. Louis and St. Louis county by the applicants and that they found a "well-ordered, well-handled business" without apparent problems.

The request to open the games room in the building already occupied by Rice's II and the Fluo Market was filed with the council Dec. 15 by Joseph Tumminia and Edward Tumminia, brothers of St. Louis. After brief discussion at that time, the matter was referred to Veizer for an investigation and report.

Veizer told the aldermen that he also had talked with Fire Chief Don Parente about the proposal and that Parente also opposed it because of fire regulations. Veizer said Parente told him that the building would need to be (Continued on Page 10)

Downtown resurgence is sought

A special City Council committee to work with Downtown Granite City, Inc., in a long-range program for redevelopment of the downtown district was appointed by Mayor Paul Schuler Monday night.

The appointments followed a presentation by Donald Strohmeier, planning consultant for Downtown Granite City who outlined objectives of the organization in "a rebirth of the downtown area" which he said would require full cooperation between "the merchants, the landlords and the city fathers."

Named to the committee were Aldermen Steve Basarich of the (Continued on Page 10)

Bonds to trim cost of sewers

By GARY SCHNEIDER
Press-Record Staff Writer

A new plan to finance the proposed sanitary sewers program in Nameoki, Chouteau and Venice Townships is being considered by the Madison County Special Sewer Committee as a way to save local users more than $1 million—by changing from a revenue bond method of financing to a general obligation bond sale.

If the committee selects the general obligation bond route, it could save the average homeowner roughly $6 per month, and also eliminate or greatly reduce the proposed tap-on fee, it has been estimated.

The general obligation bond program would have several advantages partly by a relatively unpopular method—property taxation. But the savings to each family and property owner are likely to be so great as to make the creation of a special service area for tax purposes the only feasible means of financing the proposed sanitary sewers, officials are saying.

The proposed change in the method of financing the sewers was the subject of a meeting of the Sewers and Drainage Committee of the Tri-Cities Area Chamber of Commerce Tuesday afternoon, during which Walter "Dick" Sparks, chairman of the county's special sewer committee, announced the new financing proposal and answered questions about it.

Sparks said there still are many unanswered questions which are under study by Van Kampen, Wauters & Brown, Inc., Chicago, fiscal advisers for the project, and by the bonding attorneys in Chicago.

He said all current estimates of the cost to each homeowner of having new sewers are based on the assumption there will be a $60 million assessed valuation in the special service area, which is to be made up of all taxes to be taxed.

Sparks estimated the assessed valuation in Chouteau Township will be at least $16 million and that the portions of Nameoki and Venice townships in the district should bring it close to the $60 million mark.

Noting that the estimates are "very rough" at this time, Sparks said that studies, thus far, have indicated the tax to be levied on new sewer users after the sewer is completed, would be about 60 cents per year for each $100 of assessed valuation, or a tax bill of about $30 per year for a $5,000 home assessed at $5,000 under the one-third equalized assessment formula.

Under the new sewer users would pay about $2.50 per month for sewage treatment and maintenance, a total treatment and maintenance bill of about $4 per month.

The tap-on fee would either be eliminated, or reduced to about 10 cents for inspection and tap-on labor.

Only homes in the district served by the new sewers would be taxed. Areas already having sanitary sewers would not be included in the new taxing district.

Sparks noted the sewers may seem expensive but actually will be much less expensive than if revenue bonds were sold to finance the local share of the sewer installation cost.

Sewer bills for the average homeowner in the area to be served have been estimated at $15 to $16 per month, with a tap-on fee of up to $1,000, if the local share is financed by revenue bonds, Sparks explained.

Ed Juneau, engineer and a planner of the sanitary sewer system, told the Press-Record the bonding advisers told committee members that (Continued on Page 9)

Cruse family struck, robbed

Three robbers entered the home of Granite City Township Tax Assessor Von Dee Cruse, 2329 Edwards St., about midnight last night, struck Cruse and his wife, made the pair and a son lie on the floor and stole more than $9,000 cash, and Cruse's wallet and rings.

Granite City police had a man and a woman in custody this morning who are to be questioned in connection with the case and a Dec. 27 tavern armed robbery. A third person is being sought for questioning.

The Cruse family contacted police at 12:15 a.m. today and related they had just broken free after being locked in a basement closet following the robbery.

Police were summoned and the family related the events of the robbery, which took about 15 minutes to complete.

The son, Eric Cruse, 23, said he answered a knock on the front door of the home about midnight and a man asked for a person by an apparently fictitious name. Before the son could reply, the man displayed a gun and forced his way inside, Eric said.

The robber shoved Eric to the floor and made him turn over. Down before asking him, "Where's your old man's money?"

Eric said he told the man he did not know of any money kept in the house. At that time, he (Continued on Page 4)

Lovejoy tragedy in 1837 recalled

(Third of a Bicentennial Year series)

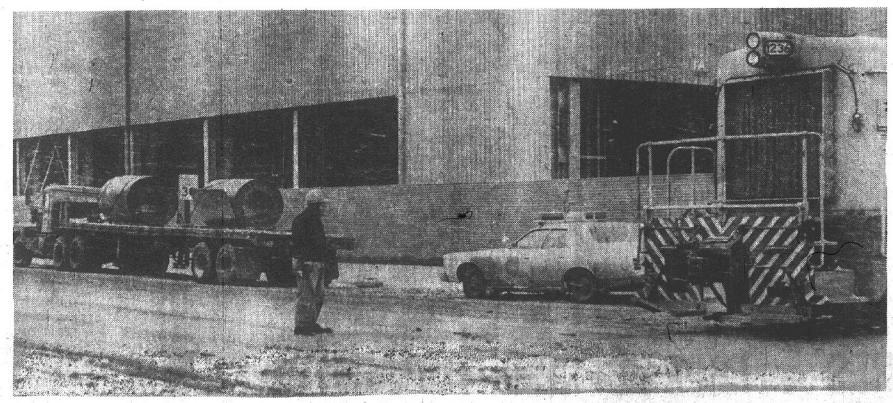

One of this region's and the nation's best known defenders of freedom of speech and of the press, Elijah Parrish Lovejoy gave up his life in that cause on the night of Nov. 7, 1837.

Reeling as five bullets entered his body, he staggered back into Gilliam's warehouse in Alton and died a few minutes later. An assassin's gun had finally silenced the crusading newspaperman.

Target of mob violence throughout his crusade, Lovejoy fell while trying to prevent a mob from burning the warehouse in which was stored his fourth press.

Lovejoy, son of a Congregational minister, was born in Albion, Me., on Nov. 8, 1802. He graduated with highest honors from Waterville (now Colby) College.

In 1827, he made his first trip to the South. He stayed first as a teacher and then as editor of a (Continued on Page 9)

Record - 7

snowfall began freezing on the streets, street department crews at Granite City, Venice and Madison were called out to spread salt at many intersections, but reported the efforts had little success because of the low temperature.

Lionel Portell, Granite City street superintendent, said salt does little to thaw ice on the streets in temperatures below 30 degrees. Portell said Granite City street crews remained on the job until 8 p.m. Wednesday.

State police reported they were "swamped" with calls on accidents, but most of them were minor, involving damage only.

The slippery pavement yesterday was believed to have played a part in an accident between a Granite City police squad car and a pickup truck.

It was reported the squad car, driven by Patrolman Stephen Willard, was westbound on 25th Street and the pickup truck, driven by Benjamin Favier, 2151 Cleveland Blvd., was southbound on Cleveland when they collided.

Vadallabene to leave hospital

State Sen. Sam Vadallabene (D-Edwardsville) was to be released today from St. Elizabeth Hospital where he has been treated the last six days for a hiatus hernia, a malfunction affecting the diaphragm.

The problem does not affect the senator's heart and will be treated by a diet, his wife said, noting he also is supposed to "lose a little weight."

MOTORIST NOT TAKEN INTO POLICE CUSTODY

Ronald Schubert, 19, of 1836 Spring Ave., was treated at St. Elizabeth Hospital following an auto accident last week and was released.

He was not taken into police custody. While at the hospital, he was charged with reckless driving in connection with the accident.

Trojans defeat Cahokia; game halted by fans

Madison High School cagers, bouncing back from a loss to Edwardsville in the championship contest of the Edwardsville holiday tournament, gained their ninth win of the season against two losses Tuesday evening with a 60-53 victory over the host Cahokia Comanches.

Cahokia fans are still wondering if the Comanches could have overcome the seven-point deficit if the contest had been permitted to go the full regulation time.

Officials stopped the contest with two minutes and two seconds left to play when an altercation on the court resulted in a virtual free-for-all between fans from both schools.

No one was injured in the melee, but the victory was awarded to Madison on the basis of the score when the game was halted.

The Trojans led 18-12, 38-28 and 50-42 at the quarters. On field goals made, Madison 22 of 33 attempts and Cahokia 22 of 48. The contest was decided on charity tosses, Madison making 16 of 23 and the Comanches nine of 14.

Cahokia committed the most fouls, 20-15, and the most turnovers, 18-9.

The hosts recovered 30 rebounds to Madison's 25.

Trojan Ron Jones pulled down 10 rebounds and with his brother, Randall, together accounted for scored 35 of Madison's total points; Randall Jones tallied 19 points and Ron Jones 16. The two combined for 11 free throw points.

Scoring also for Madison were Joe Gulash with 11 points, Edwin Garrett and Ron Williams five each and Danny Bankhead, four.

Cahokia's Gerald Washington led Cahokia scoring with 27 points.

Dudley tops Dudley in Cougars' victory

It was a case of third time charm as the Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville basketball team used a torrid second half to romp over Culver-Stockton College's Wildcats, 79-55 at the Edwardsville High School gym Tuesday night.

It was the third meeting between the two schools' cage teams, and Culver-Stockton won both of the previous meetings.

For SIUE Coach Jim Dudley, the victory was double satisfying. It topped his charges' record to 3-7 and proved to him that his team could scramble to win a game and effectively use a pressing defense.

At the same time, the game's outcome wasn't satisfying to Coach Jim Dudley of the Culver-Stockton team, as the Wildcats' record fell to 7-5.

Although they both have the same name, the Dudleys aren't related. Each started coaching at his present school six years ago.

After a nail-biting 28-28 first half, the Cougars suddenly went to a pressing defense and paced by Pete Catlings and Bob Herrod, each with four-for-five, and senior John Strubberg's six-out-of-eight effort in the final half—SIUE zoomed to a 54-40 lead.

The Cougars coasted in from there. They held Culver-Stockton's big man, 6-6 Bob Folkerts, to just one field goal over the same stretch of time.

The Cougars played their toughest only had one day to enjoy their victory. It was back to the hard and cruel road, as tonight they visit Owensboro, Ky., to play always-powerful Kentucky Wesleyan.

After 19 games, the Cougars show a well-balanced scoring attack: Pete Catlings (11.4), Bobby Herrod (11.1), John Strubberg (10.8), Al Hunt (10.3), Jim Allen (8.9), and Kell Peebles (8.7). Hunt, whose driving penetration of the Culver-Stockton defense was crucial, leads in team assists with 45 and Peebles in next with 30.

SIUE's four top performers in assists are: Strubberg (28), Herrod (25), Mike Miller (15) and Vince Barnett (12). The latter saw limited action Tuesday but appeared to be still favoring his injured ankle.

Catlings, whose leaping and jumping talents give him an average of three baskets a game on tips, leads SIUE in rebounding with 10.6 per game average. SIUE's freshman all-star from Morrisville, 6-8, Jim Allen, is next in pulling down caroms, with 7.5. Miller (7.1), Barnett (6.2), Strubberg (5.9) and Herrod (4.8) finish out the leaders.

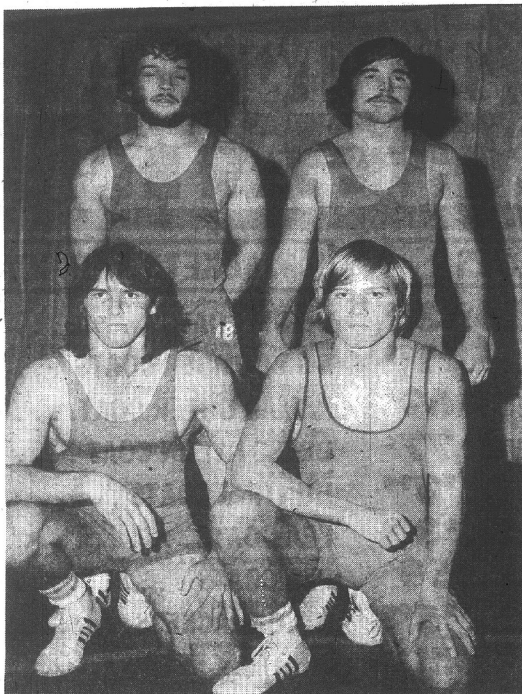

Catlings paces the Cougars at the free throw line with a 72.0 average. Al Hunt (77 of 106), Kell Peebles (11-17) and Jim Allen (14-14) have drawn the bulk of the fouls awarded to the Cougars.

SIUE opponents in 10 games have outscored the Cougars, 71.5 to 76.2. But, as usual, the Cougars under Dudley's style of play have taken 732 shots to their foes' 686 attempts.

After Kentucky Wesleyan, the Cougars will return for another "home" game next Monday (Jan. 12) at the St. Louis area on Oakland Avenue in a 6:30 p.m. first game of a college doubleheader. St. Louis University will take on Iowa State U. in the second contest at 8:30 p.m.

Weekend home tilts and then Sparta's tourney for Devils

The Venice High School Red Devils meet two opposing schools this weekend before entering the 10th annual Sparta Mid-Winter Basketball Classic Monday as the top-seeded team in the seven-school tournament.

Coach Richard Essington's team, now with a 7-1 record which includes the Freeburg Christmas holiday tournament championship, plays host to Quincy Notre Dame at 8 p.m. tomorrow and then hosts Altamont at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Sparta's annual tourney was reduced to seven schools after Mascoutah withdrew to participate in a tournament elsewhere.

Venice, having suffered a lone defeat this season, 67-66, to East St. Louis Lincoln in a controversial finish, is the Sparta tournament's defending champion as well as reigning state Class A champion.

At last year's Sparta classic, the Red Devils set a state record after playing Mascoutah in eight overtime periods before emerging victorious.

Entered also are Marissa, Freeburg, Okawville, Sparta, Campbell Hill (Trico) and Waterloo.

Seeded second, third and fourth behind the Red Devils are Okawville, Freeburg and Waterloo.

As for the top-seeded team, Venice drew a first-round bye Monday.

The tournament will open Monday at Okawville playing Sparta at 7:30 p.m. Competition resumes Tuesday with Marissa meeting Freeburg at 7 p.m. followed by Campbell Hill playing Waterloo at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Venice will play the victor of Tuesday's Marissa-Freeburg contest at 8:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 15, in a semifinal contest.

Another semifinal game will be played at 8:30 p.m. Friday between winners of Okawville-Sparta and Campbell Hill-Waterloo.

A victory Thursday would pit Venice against the victor of Friday's semifinal contest in a tournament championship game at 9 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 17.

A semifinal loss by Venice on Thursday would result in the Red Devils playing at 7:30 p.m. Saturday for third place.

Consolation contests are slated for 7 p.m. Thursday and 6 p.m. Friday.

In eight outings, the Red Devils have scored 601 points compared to opponents' 439. Venice has put 261 field goals through the net along with 79 foul shots.

Twelve different Red Devils have scored points this far: Reggie Gardner, a 5-11 senior; 148; Jaffee Woolfork, a 6-2 senior; 134; James Turner, a 5-11 senior; 106; James Crowder, a 6-2 senior; 92; Ricky Salmon, a 5-11 sophomore; 88; Ronald Salmon, a 5-8 freshman; 35; Anthony Wise, a 5-8 freshman; eight; Charles Cotton, a 6-0 sophomore; and Larrick Arnold, a 6-0 junior, seven points each; Bryan Matlock, a 10-junior; six; Tim Walker, a 9-0 sophomore; and Walker Gowan, a 5-10 junior, one point.

3 local girls' teams in district volleyball

GCHS North, GCHS South and Madison High School are among 10 girls' volleyball teams which will vie starting Monday at Dupo, hoping to capture the second annual Illinois High School Association volleyball district title.

Competing also at Dupo will be East St. Louis, Collinsville, East St. Louis Lincoln, Cahokia, East St. Louis Assumption, O'Fallon and Dupo.

The Dupo district meet is one of 64 district tournaments which will begin statewide Monday.

District champions advance to eight sectional sites Jan. 20, with the Dupo victor joining district champions from Breese, Freeburg and Stanton in sectional competition at Mount Olive.

The Mount Olive sectional title will advance to super-sectional competition at Bellevue West on Tuesday, Jan. 27, with the victor there earning the right to compete in the state finals at Illinois State University at Normal on Jan. 30-31.

GCHS South, coached by Wilma Schulze, has drawn a first-round bye at Dupo as the top-seeded team with a 5-2 record.

GCHS North, coached by Sharon Woodworth, enters the tournament undefeated, 3-0. Madison, coached by Luvenia Long, has an 0-4 mark.

BENEFIT BASKETBALL MARATHON Marcus R. Voegelge III, 3168 Aubrey Ave., Granite City, a member of Omicron Gamma Alpha, the Aurora (Ill.) College fraternity, joined that group in a 20-hour marathon to raise funds for the United Way. The basketball game was conducted from a Saturday evening through early afternoon of the following day, with six teams of five men each playing 20-hour-long games. Two-hour rest periods between contests found sleeping fraternity members tucked in blankets between the bleachers; they snacked on orange juice, popcorn and hot dogs. In the final tally, the "blue" team defeated the "white" team 1,828 to 1,827. Real winner was the United Way, which will serve communities around the college with the $640 earned by the students. Voegelge, a sophomore, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Voegelge. His field of study is pre-law supplemental.

243 schools in Class AA wrestling meets next month

A whopping 395 downstate and suburban schools have entered teams in the 39th annual Illinois High School Association (IHSA) two-class boys' state wrestling tournament series, which begins at the district level the weekend of Feb. 13-14.

A total of 152 schools with enrollments of 750 or less will compete in the third Class A series, while 243 schools with enrollments of 751 or more will compete in the Class AA series.

In addition, the Chicago Public League will conduct a qualifying tournament for individual berths in the Class AA state final tournament.

In the two years of class competition, there has been an increase of 21 schools competing in the smallest in the Class A series. The number of schools competing in the large school (Class AA) series has grown by 15, and the Chicago Public League schools.

A total of 381 schools competed in 1975.

All 16 Class A districts will begin the evening of Friday, Feb. 13, and will conclude with two sessions Saturday, Feb. 14. Likewise, all 28 Class AA districts will start the evening of Feb. 13 and conclude with two sessions Saturday, Feb. 14.

First and second place finishers in each weight class at the districts advance to sectional warfare, scheduled for the weekend of Feb. 20-21 at four sites—Mt. Olive, Normal (University), Port Byron (Riverdale) and Yorkville. In Class A and at seven sites in Class AA.

The Class AA sectional tournaments will be at Barrington, Champaign (Central), Dixon, Granite City (South), Naperville (Central), Northlake (West Leiden) and Richton Park (Rich South).

All four Class A sectionals will begin with one session the evening of Friday, Feb. 20, and will conclude with a pair of sessions Saturday, Feb. 21.

All the Class AA sectionals but the one at Champaign will begin with one session on Feb. 20 and conclude with two sessions Feb. 21. The Champaign (Central) sectional will start with a single session Thursday, Feb. 19, and conclude with two sessions Saturday, Feb. 21.

In both classes, the top two finishers in each weight class will advance from the sectional to the state final tournament, scheduled the weekend of Feb. 27-28 at the Assembly Hall in Champaign.

In addition, the top two finishers in each weight class in the Chicago Public League qualifying tournament advance to the Class AA state final. The state final tournament will be conducted concurrently for the two enrollment classes. One year ago, 35,319 fans attended the various sessions of competition in the 16,000-seat State University High.

Last year, Savanna captured its second straight Class A team title with 51½ points to edge Normal (University High) by seven points as Coach Charles Anderson's Indians had a trio of state champions—then-junior Dave Mathus at 98 pounds, senior Paul Engold at 132 and senior Len Robinson at 145.

Chicago Heights (Blom) and Oak Lawn (Richards) deadlocked for the Class AA title with 33 points, a half point difference.

In the two years of class competition, there has been an increase of 21 schools competing in the smallest in the Class A series. The number of schools competing in the large school (Class AA) series has grown by 15, and the Chicago Public League schools.

A final proposal is expected to be presented to the IHSA board of directors before the 1977 meet and conditions for the 1977 meet are drawn. If approved, such a plan could go into effect for the 1977 tournament series.

Season tickets for this year's state tournament are on sale by mail from the Assembly Hall. Advance season tickets at a reduced price of $6 each are on sale and may be ordered by sending check (made payable to the University of Illinois) or money order to: IHSA State Wrestling Meet Tickets, Room 400, Assembly Hall, Champaign, Ill., 61820.

Single-session tickets will be on sale each day of the State Tournament at a price of $2.

Granite City wrestlers coached by William Schmitt shared the 1965 state wrestling championship with Oak Lawn (Reavis), each team garnering 31 points.

In the February 1975 Class AA state finals, fifth-place matches included victories by Kevin Page of GCHS South over Dave Palmeno of Rockford East 6-3 at 119 pounds, and Mike Koch of Franklin Park (East Leiden) 7-0 in the 86-pound division over GCHS North's Keith Whelan.

South earned six team points and North four in the state meet.

Page, who later graduated, had a 35-21 record in 1974-75. Whelan, still a senior, had a 29-7 record a year ago.

Since state wrestling meets began in Illinois in 1937, eight Granite Cityans have won individual state championships.

Girls' volleyball meets attract 608 high schools

Defending champion Winterland (New Trier East) will host a 10-team district, one of 64 first-level tournaments about the state, as a record 608 schools enter the second annual (IHSA) girls' state volleyball tournament.

District contenders at Dupu will include GCHS North and South and Madison.

District tournaments will be conducted Jan. 12-17, with the 64 winners advancing to sectional competition Jan. 20-24. Sixteen sectional champions will square off in super-sectional matches Tuesday, Jan. 27, at 7:30 p.m., with the eight survivors earning berths in the second state final tournament the weekend of Jan. 30-31 at the Fieldhouse on the campus of Illinois State University, Normal.

Super-sectionals will be conducted at Aurora (E.P.), Belleville (West), Charleston (Eastern Illinois U.), Jacksonville (Northern Illinois State U.), Oak Lawn (Richards), Rolling Meadows and Sterling.

Last winter, New Trier East defeated Park Forest (Rich East) in three games (15-0, 15-1 and 15-1) to annex the initial state title as Coach Bonnie Beach's Indians finished the campaign with a 16-1 record.

Returning from that squad are starters Lisa Marder and Lauren Goebel. They also played on the New Trier East field hockey team, which advanced to the first-ever IHSA girls' state field hockey tournament in mid-November.

Goebel and Marder, who share the state tournament record for blocked shots with a trio, may be enough to carry the Indians to a second straight title. In addition, Mike Goebel holds the title mark for record for consecutive points served at nine.

But the large field of teams competing for the title could produce some startling results, like another Red Bud. A school of 512 students, Red Bud placed third a year ago and returns many of last year's state final tournament squad.

A year ago, 481 schools sent teams into the girls' volleyball tournament series. There are 127 more schools entering teams in this year's meet than last year's.

This year, tournament matches will consist of best-of-three games, with the winning team scoring two points at the conclusion of each game.

Illinois is experimenting with volleyball rules this season, and the outcome of the experiment will be sent to the National Federation of State High School Associations for evaluation.

The National Federation is charged with the responsibility of writing volleyball rules under which high school teams compete. Ordinarily, volleyball matches consist of 15-point games, with the match winner taking the best of three competition.

There will be a total of 35 districts with 10 teams competing, 26 with nine teams and a trio with eight teams.

Dupo entries are Cahokia, East St. Louis, Assumption, O'Fallon, East St. Louis and Lincoln of East St. Louis.

1976 Olympics 'deck' stacked

By STAN SHALETT
Idealism is great, but in sports idealism means at least two parties to the ideal to work.

In international sports, the United States enters the arena much as a rube enters a Las Vegas casino, sits down with the pros and attempts to win.

That this country's teams have any success at all is a demonstration of great talent and dedication overcoming fantastic odds and obstacles. Most of the time, American amateurs are competing with professional athletes that are completely subsidized by their country that use sports and competitive athletics as a political tool or a means of national pride.

For example, the Russian national basketball team that has been traveling in the United States has only two teen-agers on its roster.

Most of the players are in their 20s and some of the veterans are over 30. When we put together an international basketball team, the players are all college boys, because the amateurs can't afford the time off from work to make the trip.

Bobby Knight, Indiana's coach, says we ought to send our top pros to play the Russians. That's a fair matchup.

For years, America's amateur teams were guided or controlled by the late Avery Brundage, a millionaire who had tunnel vision when viewing international sports.

No matter that the Communist countries felt their teams were arms of the government in international affairs, no matter that virtually every European country found ways to pay its athletes, usually on the basis of payment (as firm men, postmen, soldiers, etc.).

We had to be simple-pure in the true amateur spirit. American kids were going up against pros, winning some, and losing others.

Not only were our teams handicapped, but the bureaucracy between the Amateur Athletic Union, the NCAA, the U.S. Olympic Committee and the various federations of coaching groups turned our international teams into feuding grounds where the athletes got murdered in the cross fire.

Most European nations have a ministry in the government for sports. This central body runs the programs, and handles the finances.

It's no secret that our teams are underfunded. Every Olympic year, there's a hue and cry about this country's weaknesses in certain sports.

Obviously, these are solvable. All we need is decent financing and direction.

I think that every sports ticket in the United States ought to have a 10-cent surcharge for this country's international teams. We need to send our athletes into competition on a continuous basis and we need to support people who need to train all the time and don't get subsidization from any other source such as the NCAA's member colleges.

I don't think the United States should win every gold medal in the Olympics, but we shouldn't lose any because of lack of preparation or funds to get our men and women ready.

Transportation secretary one of busiest Cabinet members

By L. EDGAR PRINA
WASHINGTON — Secretary of Transportation William T. Coleman Jr., the second black ever to serve as a Cabinet officer, is one self-avowed liberal Republican who thinks President Ford is just great.

He made this plain during an interview in his office here in which he said he was ready and rarin' to campaign for the President in the 1976 election campaign.

"I'll go anywhere, anytime speak to anybody the President wants me to," Coleman declared.

"I find him a very good leader, very decisive and a person who really understands the issues."

Coleman, a rotund man (5 feet 7 and 185 pounds) who at 55 is graying at the temples, then leaned back in his overstuffed chair, propped one foot up on a coffee table, and got something off his chest:

"I think the press has been somewhat unfair to the President. They haven't appreciated all the changes he has made in government."

"Take accessibility, for example. Any Cabinet officer has complete access to the President. I've seen him anytime I've wished."

"I pick up the phone and see him within a day or so or talk with him on the phone. I've seen him at least two or three times every 10 days since I've been here." (Coleman was sworn in as secretary March 7, 1975.)

"My good friend Elliott Richardson tells me that I have already had more visits with the President than he had in five years, during which he held four Cabinet posts," the secretary said.

"As he recalls, when he was invited to the Oval Office (by Richard Nixon) it was only to be hired or fired."

The bespectacled Coleman would doubtless be a campaign asset for the President.

Bright, buoyant and at ease with people, he thoroughly enjoys his job and public speaking.

A summa cum laude graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and a magna cum laude graduate of Harvard Law School, he came to his Cabinet post from one of Philadelphia's largest and most prestigious law firms—Dilworth, Paxson, Kalish, Levy and Coleman.

He has liberal credentials galore, but he also comes on strong in support of fiscal responsibility. "Money can't solve all our problems," he says.

A conservative dresser — he wore a dark gray pinstripe vest, gold cuff links, and a tie with military stripes — Coleman proudly recalled that he worked on a case against the giant General Electric Co. in which his firm's client got a $29 million verdict.

He served on the staff of the late Justice Felix Frankfurter of the U.S. Supreme Court and, later, as a member of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations General Assembly.

A strong advocate of civil rights and equal opportunity, Coleman was one of the authors of the legal brief that helped persuade the Supreme Court in 1954 to outlaw racial segregation in public schools.

He served as president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's legal defense and educational fund.

He first met and got to know Mr. Ford, then a congressman, in 1964, when both served on the Warren Commission on the assassination of President Kennedy, Coleman as assistant counsel and Mr. Ford as a commission member.

The secretary is something of a natural politician himself. As we sat down for the interview, he explained that there might be a few interruptions, "because I'm trying to lobby."

He was referring to his efforts against the multimillion-dollar Senate bill to assist the nation's ailing railroads. The day before he had strongly attacked the measure as "completely unreasonable" and far too costly.

There were plenty of interruptions. He talked with Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., who assured him the bill would not come up for a vote on that day, allowing more time for Coleman and his aides to do their persuading on Capitol Hill. He talked with other senators and members of their staffs.

This great-great-grandson of a man who operated an underground station for runaway slaves in St. Louis more than 100 years ago, is boss of an agency with 110,000 personnel and a budget of $13.5 billion.

Trend away from protest marches

By ED ARMSTRONG
Public demonstrations to influence opinion in the United States are no longer effective.

It seems that only yesterday marches and rallies were stirring the feelings of the American people.

The march was adopted in the 1950s by the Rev. Martin Luther King and other civil rights leaders as the tool to get attention for their cause. It was, by no means a new gimmick at that time. There are numerous marches in this country recorded in the history books, but most of them turned out fruitless.

For example, back in 1894 a character named Jacob Coxey led a band of protestors from Ohio to Washington's capital to demonstrate for their populist cause. The demonstration fizzled when a share of the group were arrested for trespassing on government property. But the action gave the nation's language a term which still lives: Coxey's army.

The "Bonus Expeditionary Force" of World War I veterans and their families gathered in Washington in the summer of 1932 to pressure Congress into voting them immediate bonuses. Demonstrations by the estimated 15,000 to 20,000, who camped on government property near the Capitol, were to no avail as the Senate rejected the bonus bill. Shortly thereafter the Army drove the demonstrators out of Washington, burning the shacks they'd occupied.

Strangely, there were few marches for causes through the remainder of the depression years of the 1930's. Perhaps the people couldn't afford such activity, or maybe the memory of what happened to the veterans who marched on Washington discouraged would-be demonstrators.

The development of television may have been the biggest factor in making the march an effective tool of the civil rights cause. Leaders in the battle for civil rights took a non-violent course, but now and then they violated local laws and the directives of local officials in staging their demonstrations.

Law enforcement authorities sometimes responded with brutal attacks, using clubs and cattle prods. The showing of those responses on television and the accounts of them in the print media did more than anything else to create sympathy for the civil rights cause.

What was probably the high point of civil rights demonstrations came in 1963 when an estimated 200,000 persons descended on Washington and joined in a massive but orderly march.

As the civil rights push slowed in the middle and late 1960s, the march was taken over as the tool of the anti-war groups campaigning for the United States to pull out of the Vietnam conflict. Many of these demonstrations were centered on college campuses where emotional young students and other marchers broke the non-violent mold to engage in vandalism and destruction.

One of the major confrontations between demonstrators and law enforcement came at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago in 1968. Protesters and Chicago policemen engaged in running battles, and the National Guard had to be called out to man the barricades against the mobs which sought to influence the convention.

Now, the civil rights struggle has moved beyond the street phase, and the end of the Vietnam war has cooled the ardor of all but the most violent demonstrators.

So who's using marches and demonstrations in an effort to influence public policy? None other than the mayors of Chicago and New York.

Dick Daley brought his legions to Springfield to pressure state legislators to vote for school funding veto overrides. It was one of the mayor's occasional political miscalculations; the sight of him twisting arms in Springfield could have only a negative effect on downstate citizens, most of whom resent his clout in deciding how their tax money is going to be spent.

After the mayor returned to Chicago, the override barely made it through the House of Representatives, but it foundered in the Senate. It may have been prophetic that another delegation of Daley forces coming to lobby in the Senate was on a train which derailed near Joliet.

Recently, New York Mayor Abe Beame called for a massive demonstration to show the rest of the nation how much New Yorkers think of their city. Abe was trying to generate some pressure on a reluctant President Ford to use the federal purse to bail the so-called Big Apple out of its financial mess.

Abe had such personages as Leonard Bernstein and Woody Allen joining the city's politicians in praising their metropolis and lambasting the President.

The national news media gave the event the coverage it deserved — the light touch. And the rest of America responded with a few chuckles — and more yawns.

So goes the demonstration as a tool for influencing public opinion today.

3 students reinstated

In a special meeting of the Madison Board of Education Monday night two Madison High School students were reinstated on probation; one was expelled; and one did not show up for a hearing, which automatically stops the student from returning to school until the student and parents meet with the board.

A junior high student was reinstated for the second semester on probation. The board granted the YMCA permission to use the Dunbar and Louis Baer gym for basketball programs. The regular meeting of the board will be Thursday, Jan. 15, at the board office, 1707 Fourth St., Madison.

Wilson students to offer candy

Wilson School PTA executive board, meeting Tuesday night at the school, agreed to cancel the regular PTA meeting this month. Members also planned a fund raising project to begin Jan. 30.

President Mrs. Dorothy Baker introduced a representative from a candy company which will provide boxes of candy for students to sell from Jan. 30 through Feb. 17. Mrs. Linda McGee was named project chairman.

Mrs. Marie Powell was appointed chairman of a committee to plan an awards dinner in February and to select nominees to be honored. Details of the dinner will be presented to the board in February.

Mrs. Baker reported all yearbooks have been delivered and the deadline for students to order school memory books will be Friday.

Others present included Teresa Pinn, Diane Dettwiler, Becky Lipchik, Isabelle Anderson, Barbara McCaskey, Phyllis Geake and Ted Venick, school principal.

North Band Parents revise meeting time

Harold Stoker, president of Granite City High School North Band Parents, said final plans for a band party to be held at 7 p.m. Friday, Jan. 16, in North High cafeteria were made during a meeting of the parents' group on Tuesday night.

The Pop and Pretzel Concert, set for 8 p.m., Feb. 2, at North High School, also was discussed.

Robert Todoroff, band director, displayed a drawing of the proposed uniform for a rifle and flag detail. It is expected that students will have the uniforms in time for the Bicentennial parade on July 3, he said.

Stoker reported monthly meetings will convene promptly at 7:30 p.m. and close at 9 p.m. The next meeting will take place Feb. 10.

Twenty-three members attended the session.

Chouteau sets meeting dates

The Chouteau Town Board of Auditors Monday night approved meeting dates for the remainder of January and for February.

Due to the Madison County Township officials' meeting Jan. 12 in Edwardsville, the Chouteau board voted to hold its next regular meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 13.

All other meetings are set for Mondays, Jan. 26, Feb. 9 and Feb. 23, all at 7 p.m. There will be a meeting of the township's Community Development citizens' advisory committee at 7 p.m. Monday, Feb. 2, at which additional plans for the proposed township building and community center will be discussed with the architect, John Rapp.

SEEK STOLEN CAR

Bonds

"general unrest in the bond market will make it difficult to sell revenue bonds at a reasonable interest rate."

Fiscal authorities estimated that the bonds would have to carry at least eight per cent interest—and still would not sell, unless they were discounted about another five per cent to make their sale more attractive.

Between the high interest rate and the discounting of the bonds, local users of the sewers could be paying a total of about 13 per cent interest on the estimated $3,436,700 to $4,000,000 in bonds to be sold to finance the local share of construction costs.

The interest could run as high as $700,000 and the discounting could cost another $300,000 or more, Juncue asserted.

In addition, use of revenue bonds paid back by user fees would mean interest would start as soon as the bonds are sold. The interest would continue through the construction of the sewers, he noted.

With general obligation bonds, the interest would continue to be held to five or six per cent and the interest would not start until the completion of construction, he related.

"People just don't like taxes, and we know that," Juncue said. He added, however, "I think people would rather pay $30 to $50 on their annual tax bills for sewers instead of $14 to $16 per month in user fees."

"We are going to pay for sewers, no matter how we go. They are not cheap."

"Even a septic tank which meets the county's standards costs a minimum of $1,000."

"So, about $30 per year for sewers, until the bonds are paid off, is not too small to ask," Juncue continued.

"Here we have a chance to get the sewer at about one-fourth the cost, with state grants paying nearly three-fourths. We may never have this opportunity again."

"There are very few communities which have received actual construction grant offers, and if we do not take advantage of it, that money will go to another community," he said.

The state has offered a $10,309,900 grant for the program, he explained.

"The committee has been endeavoring for five years to get sewers for this community at the lowest possible cost and we feel we have arrived at the best possible solution," Juncue asserted.

He also noted that most of the developers and "big land owners" in the area to be served have indicated they want to be in the program, even though their taxes would rise.

"They realize the tremendous boon these sewers are going to be to future growth in this area and to their own benefit."

"The day still may come when the federal or state government tells the county it must get rid of septic tanks, which are causing a health nuisance. Then, the cost would be much greater to build the sewers, especially since we would be carrying the whole load," Juncue told the Press-Record.

Sparks said at the Chamber of Commerce committee meeting that he feels the Nameoki, Chouteau and Venice residents who will be served will support the sewer committee in efforts to establish the special taxing district.

"This particular program looks like a more feasible program than we have ever worked on. It is even better than the revenue bond program we had been working on."

"In addition to a lower monthly or annual cost, there will be a very small or no tap-on fee," Sparks emphasized.

He said a "very detailed gathering of information" is being initiated to determine the boundaries of the proposed taxing district, the assessed valuation within the district, and whether there is anyone who should be excluded from sewer service.

"The way this is shaping up, we don't anticipate anyone wanting out, but if there is a large subdivision or big chunk of land that wants out, we could always draw the boundaries around them" to exclude them, Sparks commented.

He said the committee would prefer not to exclude anyone who could be served by the new sewers, since decreasing the size of the taxing district would decrease the assessed valuation and potentially jeopardize the financial base for the program.

He explained that tentative boundaries have been drawn which are to be considered by bonding attorneys within the next week or so. When they are approved by the attorneys, the final assessed valuation of the district will be determined.

If the assessed valuation is close to the $60 million mark, planning can continue in order to establish the district.

Every resident of the district must be notified by mail of plans to hold a public hearing on the taxing district proposal. Those who wish to speak or present a written statement at the public hearing are to respond by mail, notifying the committee of their intentions to do so.

A transcript is to be made of the public hearing.

The tax levy then may be established and submitted to the Madison County clerk for annual collection after the sewers have been completed.

Under the 1970 Illinois Constitution and a 1973 interpretation of the law, 51 per cent of the proposed users and 51 per cent of landowners in the new taxing district would have to sign a petition supporting the creation of the district in order to defeat it.

During the period that the tax district is being established, the fiscal advisers and bonding attorneys will be making preparations to sell the general obligation bonds. "They can be sold as soon as the tax has been assessed," it is believed.

"They have told us they will have no problems selling the bonds, since they are assured of repayment by tax funds," Sparks said.

While the establishing of the tax district and the preparations to sell the bonds are in progress, the committee can continue to prepare for actual construction.

"We have been told the state Environmental Protection Agency will give final approval to our construction plans within the next 28 days," Sparks said. "and we can offer specifications to contractors by March 20 for bids."

"We hope to open the bids April 26 and award contracts by May 1," Sparks noted.

As soon as the contracts have been awarded and it is known how many bonds will have to be sold to raise the local share of the construction cost, the bond sales can begin, he said.

"We do not anticipate that contractors will want to begin work before the bonds are sold and they are assured of getting their money, but some might get started soon after the bond sale starts."

"We do not expect it will take long to sell the general obligation bonds," Sparks said. "Some men with money invested didn't want the young editor-preacher, newly arrived, to alienate the friendship of the South while the rival town of St. Louis boomed."

A few days after the announcement, the press was boxed for shipment to Alton.

Before it could be transported, much of the press was destroyed and thrown into the river by undetected men.

What was left of the press was shipped to Alton and was unloaded on the Alton wharf early on a Sunday morning. Curious crowds inspected the press during the day. Sometime that night, what was left of the press and the type was destroyed and tossed into the river.

A new press arrived in Alton Sept. 8, 1836. A few days later, the first issue of the "Alton Observer" appeared.

On June 28, 1857, Lovejoy published a "call" for signatures to petitions for the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia.

The following week he published his reasons, evidently written on July 4, for forming without delay an Illinois State Anti-Slavery Society.

Such a society was soon organized by the Rev. T. B. Hurlbut of Upper Alton.

Citizens disapproving of the editorial policy of the Observer called a public meeting at the market square (later Lincoln Douglas) on July 21, 1837.

Lovejoy counteracted this by writing an editorial entitled, "What are the doctrines of the anti-slavery men?"

A mob attempted to assault Lovejoy on Aug. 21, 1837.

Later that night, they broke into the Observer office and destroyed the press and type.

Friends of Lovejoy raised money for a third press which arrived Sept. 21, 1837.

A guard was posted to protect the new press but, after retired, 12 men entered the Godfrey-Gillman warehouse and rolled the press to the river bank, where it was smashed and cast into the river.

A public meeting was held calling for free press and free speech. A committee was organized to study the problem in Alton.

Cyrus Edwards, then a member of the state Senate and Whig candidate for governor, was elected chairman of the committee.

The committee advised Lovejoy to abandon his mission in Alton.

powerful attack. The climax came with the mob slaying in St. Louis a Negro deckhand named McIntosh. Jailed for killing a white man who had grossly abused him, McIntosh was seized by a mob, chained to a stump and burned to death.

His charred corpse was left unburied. The action of the crowd was sanctioned by City Judge Lawless, at a subsequent trial.

The action aroused the editor. Lovejoy launched a bitter attack on the misdeeds of justice.

Threatened again and again, and feeling that this attack could best be carried out across the river in Alton, Lovejoy announced his coming move in the June 29, 1837, issue of the Observer.

But Lovejoy was to find himself unwelcome in Alton, too.

Within a few days, the bustling river port was to be chartered as a city and it envisioned a prosperous and growing town.

Much of the trade, by riverboat, was with the South. Some men with money invested didn't want the young editor-preacher, newly arrived, to alienate the friendship of the South while the rival town of St. Louis boomed.

A few days after the announcement, the press was boxed for shipment to Alton.

Before it could be transported, much of the press was destroyed and thrown into the river by undetected men.

While the editor had the right to "entertain and promulgate anti-slavery views, it was not expedient that he should do so."

To promote peace and harmony in the city, he was asked to sever his connection with the paper.

Lovejoy, although aware of the danger he was facing, elected to stay in Alton.

The fourth press, shipped from Cincinnati, arrived in Alton on the night of Nov. 6.

Sixty well-armed men gathered to guard the press in Gillham's warehouse, but only a few remained the night of Nov. 7.

Nothing happened until 10 p.m. Then the mob began to gather as if by prearranged agreement.

The leaders stepped forward to announce the building would be burned if the press were not turned over to the mob.

It was in protecting the building and the press from fire that Lovejoy lost his life.

The press was taken, broken up, and cast into the Mississippi, but the Observer did not die.

Elisha W. Chester printed the Observer in Cincinnati for several years.

Rev. Hurlbut acted as the Alton agent, distributing the paper and reporting local news. The history of Lovejoy and the "Alton Observer" is more than the tale of an abolitionist effort.

A far greater freedom was involved. This freedom of press and of speech had been established by the bold American patriots who sacrificed life and wealth to secure liberty for all.

Men such as Elijah P. Lovejoy have stood — and sometimes failed — to maintain this freedom for every American.

In Lovejoy's words, this freedom is expressed:

"But gentlemen, as long as I am an American citizen and as long as American blood runs in my veins, I shall hold myself to liberty to speak, to write, and to publish whatever I please on my subject — being amenable to the laws of my country for the same."

Terminal yards noisier, alderman tells council

Second Ward Alderman Hank A. Sweatt complained to the Venice City Council at its meeting Tuesday evening that the noise from the Terminal Railroad Association switching yard in Madison is growing worse.

"Mr. Mayor, that noise is getting real bad. It used to be just the screeching sound, but now there is loud banging, and it shakes the houses," Sweatt said.

Mayor William "Mike" Ebersoldt said, "I'll contact the railroad and have the clerk send a letter to find out just where the banging noise is coming from and why. We know the screeching sounds will not stop until the sound retarders are finished this spring; but we can sure check into the banging."

The council approved a business license application for Jefferson Riggs to open a restaurant at 4014 Weaver St. Mayor Ebersoldt said, "I have received several thank you notes and calls from people who were pleased with the Christmas baskets. Everyone seems to be real happy over the 1,300 bags of candy we were able to give to the children. This is an old custom I am glad we could start again."

"I want the council to know that as part of the Bicentennial program we are attempting to get pictures of all the former mayors of the city to place in our council room here. We can have them enlarged, put them in a frame and perhaps even have a small light over them with a plaque telling when they were mayor."

"I also want to remind the council and the people attending the meeting here that the Venice Crippled Children's dance will be held Saturday, Jan. 31, at the American Legion hall and I hope everyone will attend."

The McKinley Toll Bridge report submitted by Duane S. Georgeff showed 205,518 vehicles crossed the bridge during the month of December.

"because younger patrons could mingle with those from other parts of the building," while Alderman Frank Greenwald remarked that "this is the type of business that invites trouble."

Sam Whitmer said he believed the Biedeman building "certainly could be rented for a more attractive business."

Morlen, however, protested that the council had nothing to say about the issuance of a license for the business because that procedure is specified in city ordinances that do not require council action so long as a business meets requirements. Edward Tummania Jr. addressed the council briefly, noting that their business establishments in St. Louis and St. Louis County provide security by off-duty police. He said the same security and strict enforcement of regulations would be initiated in the Granite City game room if its establishment was authorized.

On a motion by Alderman Emerald Daves that the council concur in Veizer's recommendation, the council was permitted to open, negative votes were cast by Aldermen Decatur, Morlen, and Steve Basterich.

Those voting in favor were Aldermen Whitmer, Clyde Boyd, Roy Pauls, Earl Baker, Coleman, Daves and Greenwald. Absent were Aldermen E. Robertson, Walter Nonn, Gerald Parmley and William Dallas.

areas, including residential properties. He said that merchants in the downtown area are dedicated to the redevelopment of the downtown area in a program that will include efforts to bring new business, beautification, traffic circulation improvements, and cooperation with city officials to improve and build new government buildings.

Among objectives of the redevelopment program, Strohmeyer said, will be the promotion of a high-rise office building in downtown Granite City and cooperation with developers in a plan to upgrade housing in areas adjacent to the business district.

"There has been a lot of apathy in the past," Strohmeyer said, noting that "The downtown area is going through a stage of old age—but it is not dying. There will be a rebirth but it will not be by one man. It will take the cooperation of all."

One of the ways to strengthen the future economy of the downtown district, he added, is in the development of commercial enterprises. In this respect, the council was told, a committee has been named to work toward bringing new business into the area.

Cooperation of city officials will be essential, he said, to acquire property through processes of eminent domain in instances where acquisition of property is necessary in the solution of traffic problems. He noted that the city's plan for construction of an overpass to connect West Granite City and the downtown area is a big step toward redevelopment of the downtown area. Another example, he told the aldermen, is the city's creation of a truck route that will carry heavy traffic over 18th street rather than permit it to pass through the business district.

"This plan is going to take a number of years, but we want to act as quickly as possible and one way to accomplish this would be for the city to name a committee with which the downtown merchants can work to coordinate redevelopment plans," he said.

only referred the matter to the chief of police for an investigation, which is a good thing to do," Filcoff replied.

"Under the ordinance these people can get an attorney, if they meet the requirements to conduct a business here I don't see how you can deny them a license," Filcoff added.

He said that the city has a large number of ordinances that do not provide for council action for approval or disapproval.

"Under our licensing ordinance the clerk (city clerk) can issue a license without your even knowing about it," the attorney commented.

Whitmer at this point noted that the city plan has an ordinance prohibiting anyone under 18 playing a coin-operated device, and said, "If this place were permitted to open, I assume this ordinance will be enforced."

"I've been hearing about this business (the game room) being something for the entire family. I can't in anyway picture these as families as far as entertainment," Whitmer concluded.

Coleman asked what could be done "to avoid another like this—arguing for an hour over something that doesn't mean anything."

Alderman Boyd asked City Clerk Robert Stevens to explain the procedure he follows in issuing licenses.

Stevens replied that under the ordinance an application is made to his office and is referred to the city inspection department for investigation of physical premises involved. He said his office issues a license so long as the applicant appears qualified.

Filcoff suggested that the council review all of the ordinances pertaining to licensing with a view toward revision that could give the council authority to rule on licenses if it so desired.

"We are living with a lot of ordinances that are obsolete. They do not meet modern requirements," Filcoff added, noting that "Our licensing ordinance is a mess."

A. I'm going to give you the whole shooting match and, hopefully, that will provide a respite from one of the most frequently asked viewer questions. Here goes: "Boy, the way Glenn Miller played, 'Sonny' that made the hit parade! 'Guys like us, we had it made. 'Those were the days!'"

"And you knew where you were then, 'Girls were girls and men were men. 'Mister, we can use a man 'Like Herbert Hoover again!'"

"Didn't need no welfare state. 'Everybody pulled his weight. 'Gee, our old La Salle ran great. 'Those were the days!'"

Vadalabene is Howlett coordinator —says governor bankrupting state

State Senator Sam M. Vadalabene has been named campaign coordinator for Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett in his race for the Democratic nomination for governor in a 12-county area, including Madison County.

"To my mind, this job is both a great honor and a serious responsibility," Sen. Vadalabene said.

"For over 18 years, I have been involved in public service in Springfield. In all those years, I have never seen a man better prepared to take on the hard task of being the governor of this state than Mike Howlett."

"During those years, I have been able to watch Mike Howlett from several points of view," Vadalabene continued.

"For a time, as state auditor, he was my boss. He was a true leader. He persuaded people to give a little extra of their time and talent because they trusted and respected him."

"He is a man of his word with an interest in everyone who comes to him with a problem. Illinois badly needs Howlett's leadership now. While many of our problems stem from the Nixon-Ford recession, I'm also sorry to say that many of our problems start at the doorstep of the governor's office."

"In four years, the present administration has spent freely, using every kind of shenanigan to keep itself in office. We've been taken from a $131 million surplus to the brink of bankruptcy."

"In my opinion, it's time for the voters to tell our present governor to take a walk back to his posh suburban home outside Chicago."

"In Mike Howlett, we have a man who knows the state from top to bottom and side to side. He knows the value of a dollar and how to account to the public for every tax dollar the state government takes. That's why I intend to work my fingers to the bone to get Mike Howlett the Democratic nomination for governor."

"In getting Sam Vadalabene to go to work in my office," Howlett said, "I know I've got a proven campaigner. With this kind of hard-working participation, I know we can get the voters of the second most populous area of the state that it's long past time for a change."

"Sam is one of the most effective members of the Senate, and he has always been one of the leading vote-getters on the ticket. I know he'll be a great asset in this campaign," Howlett concluded.

Cold viruses thrive on dry air

By JOAN MURARO
SPRINGFIELD — Now that the season of colds and flu is upon us again, it might be timely to remember that old proverb which reminds us that the untreated cold, left to run its course, will drag on for a week, while the cold given prompt, medically sound treatment can usually be controlled within seven days.

The Illinois department of public health is compiling a handy list of what to do when the cold germ comes.

First, they urge, remember that despite all your precautions, the chances are you're going to catch a cold anyway — or a cold is going to catch you. More accurately, the chances are a whole bunch of colds are going to catch you. There are more than 100 different types of cold viruses, most of them capable of producing as many as 10,000 offspring within the first hour after they enter an unsuspecting host organism — you.

Once you have a cold you are immune, say the public health people, for three to four months. Unfortunately, you're only immune to that one virus, and there are still at least 99 others waiting their crack at you, so it doesn't do to count too much on immunity.

There are some things you can do, they say, to reduce the chances of coming down with a cold, flu or an influenza-like illness.

These include keeping up your natural resistance by getting adequate rest, eating properly balanced meals, while keeping the humidity and the thermostat down. Indoor humidity should be 30 to 45 per cent, while keeping the temperature down will help the humidifier do its job best. Overly dry air can, they say, reduce the ability of body tissues reducing ability to fight off infection when exposed. The cold virus, on the other hand, really likes dry air and thrives in a dry, warm atmosphere.

If having done all these good things, you still fall victim to a virus, the public health department stands by the old standard recommendations — get plenty of rest, have a sensible diet with emphasis on fruit juices and hot liquids, take aspirin if you ache or have a fever, and follow preventative hygiene by keeping your glasses, dishes and towels separate from those of the rest of the family.

Calling the doctor for a shot of penicillin won't help; penicillin doesn't faze the cold virus. Neither do massive doses of vitamin C, in the opinion of the state public health department, though reasonable amounts of vitamin C, such as come from a balanced diet, are recommended.

Car costs average over $3 each day

SPRINGFIELD — The American Automobile Association, after a comprehensive study, reports that it costs the motorist an average of $3.25 a day to own a car, even if it's never driven. Add another 64 cents for each mile it's driven.

Car costs are broken down into two categories — fixed and variable costs. Fixed costs average about $1.186 annually, or $3.25 a day. Fixed costs include depreciation, theft insurance, $53; $100 deductible collision insurance, $141; property damage and liability insurance, $189; license and registration fees, $30, and depreciation, $733.

AAA estimates that depreciation costs increase $32 for every 1,000 miles the car is driven over 15,000 miles annually.

The second category, variable costs, includes gasoline and oil, 42 cents a mile; routine maintenance, 97 cents, and tires, 66 cents a day.

In a year's time, between 1974 and 1975, car costs have increased 8.7 per cent and variable costs 13 per cent.

Motorists should be aware that these are average costs based on an intermediate size, 8-cylinder, two-door hardtop sedan equipped with standard accessories, automatic transmission, power steering, power disc brakes and radio.

Further information on costs for small and standard-size cars is also included in the report, published in the form of a booklet, "Your Driving Costs." Those interested in the booklet can contact local AAA clubs or AAA National Headquarters, 8111 Gatehouse Road, Falls Church, Va. 22042.

Make way for more minicars. Motor Publications reports that Volkswagen will be selling 4-cylinder Audi engines to American Motors. AMC is planning a front-wheel drive system for a new small economy car.

Ford also will enter the front-wheel drive ranks. It is expected to have such a minicar ready for the market by 1979. It will be called the Valencia and Ford will produce it in its plant in Valencia, Spain.

Chrysler Corp. confirms it is developing a new mini-car for the U.S. market with front-wheel drive and a 4-cylinder transverse engine, in the 2,000-pound weight class. Not an import, it will be built in the U.S.

At the same time, Chrysler also notes that by 1980 it will have redesigned every car line it manufactures, reducing average vehicle weight by about 400 pounds and improving fuel economy.

With cold weather upon us, we tend to let our car warm up for a few minutes before we get on our way. We idle it a little high so it warms up faster.

Experts say the warmup can be a lot shorter if you get moving quickly, but keep the speed down to 30 mph for the first few miles. There will be no adverse effect on the engine, and a considerable saving in gasoline.

Services to children and families expanded

Major improvements in services to children and families were made in 1975 by the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, DCFS Director Mary Lee Leahy believes.

Summarizing the agency's 1975 activity, Mrs. Leahy called attention to a record number of adoptions, implementation of a new child abuse law, establishment of 24-hour child abuse "hotline" service in every area of the state, development of improved standards for day care facilities, upgrading of the role of foster parents through increased communication and training, and renewed efforts to keep children in their own homes. Mrs. Leahy said the department's 1,239 adoptive placements in a 12-month period ending June 30, 1975, were the highest total ever. It represented a 23 per cent increase over the 1,006 children placed during the previous 12 months.

"This increase was achieved despite a sharp nationwide drop in adoptive placements because of fewer adoptive infants due to abortions, the pill, and more unwed mothers electing to keep their children," Mrs. Leahy said. "A majority of the children placed were minority, handicapped, school-age or otherwise hard-to-place."

The department's subsidized adoption program contributed to the increase, Mrs. Leahy said. Under this program, the department may provide financial help to low-income families to meet the everyday expenses of rearing a child. Subsidies also are granted for legal fees connected with adoption, for special medical or rehabilitative care for children with physical or emotional handicaps, and for special educational services. Subsidies must be less than the department would pay to maintain the child in foster care.

This program has also made it possible for many families to adopt more than one child, meaning that some natural brothers and sisters were able to stay together.

Illinois' child abuse legislation was streamlined in 1975 with passage of the new Abused and Neglected Child Reporting Act. The new law:

1. Grants immunity to all citizens who report cases of suspected abuse.
2. Adds sexual abuse and mental injury to the definition of abuse.
3. Extends protection of the law to persons up to age 18 (formerly 16).

4. Permits a physician to retain a child in a hospital under temporary protective custody while the department investigates the circumstances of the abusive episode.

To facilitate its response to emergency calls involving child abuse, the department established a 24-hour hotline service to cover every area of the state.

In June 1975, the department began awarding grants to community organizations to develop or expand child abuse prevention and intervention programs. By the end of the year, $675,000 had been authorized for two dozen groups as "seed money to promote local services in 15 communities."

In cooperation with the University of Illinois School of Social Work, three DCFS area offices (Peoria, Decatur and Champaign) developed child abuse training programs for school personnel, law enforcement officers and social workers. The training efforts were part of a plan to identify roles of various agencies in child abuse intervention and to develop contracts between them for more effective child protective services.

To afford greater protection for children who must be cared for outside their own homes, the department—in cooperation with statewide committees of professionals, parents, and day care providers—developed new standards for all types of day care facilities. They will take effect in early 1976. The department licenses more than 8,000 day care facilities.

To improve communication, Director Leahy created a Foster Parent Council. Purpose of the statewide 22-member advisory group is to give foster parents an opportunity to bring problems and proposed solutions directly to the attention to top department officials.

In December, the department mailed copies of a new foster parent guide to 6,000 department foster parents.

For the third consecutive year, the department included a $5 bonus for each foster child in the checks mailed to foster parents at Christmas.

To limit out-of-home placement of children, the department broadened its advocacy program. The programs get people, other than professionals, involved in working with children and families.

Last year, the department had 11 advocacy programs under contract with agencies to serve 607 children in Chicago, Decatur, Bloomington, Springfield, Champaign, Marion and Joliet.

Legislation passed by the 79th Illinois General Assembly affected the Illinois Soldiers' and Sailors' Children's School in Joliet, operated by DCFS. Previously, only children of veterans could be served at ISSCS. The new legislation permits the school to accept children of non-veterans.

Services to veterans residing at the department-operated Illinois Veterans Home in Quincy also were strengthened. Major improvements include addition of a social service program, establishment of an inhalation therapy section to treat pulmonary disorders, and initiation of annual physical examinations for residents.

To make its services more accessible, the department opened nine new service offices in 1975. This brings to 95 the number of field offices the department has in operation.

By moving offices closer to clients, the DCFS staff has been able to spend a greater percentage of time in direct casework.

By moving into smaller, less expensive offices (and with communities donating some space) department expenditures for rental of real property decreased from $70,000 in fiscal 1973 to $618,000 in fiscal 1975.

The offices opened in 1975 included 5319 Forest Blvd. in East St. Louis.

New job takes her 'back into prison'

By JOAN MURARO

SPRINGFIELD — Inmates serving 20 years in prison usually leave hoping never to see the place again. Lorraine Kammermann, after spending 20 years and seven months at the state prison at Pontiac, is hoping her new job will let her get back from time to time.

She is assistant to Corrections Director Allyn Siefel, so it seems likely she'll get her wish. While the job entails duties like grievance hearings at state institutions.

The corrections department has hired people who have served time in the department's facilities in the past, but Lorraine isn't one of them. For 20 years and seven months she worked as secretary to the Pontiac warden — whoever he was at the time. In her tenure she worked with seven wardens and three acting wardens, decided that "corrections is something that gets into your blood if you really like it, and if you don't really like it you ought to get out." She also decided she'd "love to have a shot" at being warden, a post she doesn't believe should be barred to women.

Kammermann says, she worked with countless inmates up for all kinds of crimes and only can remember one incident in the entire time when anyone got out of line with her, even in their speech.

About three years ago, when a riot broke out there, she stayed inside the prison for three days and says she never feared for her safety, either then or any other time she was within the walls of the maximum security facility.

Though she was listed as the warden's secretary, over the years she assumed a number of administrative duties, she says, which she feels will help her in the post of assistant to the director.

"By working at the institution, I can see things from that point of view, as well as the way the 'front office' sees them," Kammermann says.

Though born in Pontiac, she moved away when she was eight. At that time, she wasn't even aware there was a prison in Pontiac let alone having any goals of working there — as secretary or warden.

GRANITE CITY PRESS-RECORD Thurs., Jan. 8, 1976 Page 13

nois State University at Normal while she majored in the unlikely combination of business and physical education. After a couple of jobs with insurance firms and banks in Saybrook, she returned to Pontiac and "just walked in" and applied for a job.

"I asked to see the warden and told him I thought it would be an interesting place to work," Kammermann says. "A few days later his secretary quit, so I went to work." At that time there were 1,331 inmates and a clerical staff of four plus herself. She did all the warden's correspondence, interviewed job applicants and answered the phones. Over the years, with the increasing emphasis on "humanizing" the prisons, inmate rights and privileges have increased and so has the paperwork.

When she left in mid-November, the institution had 1,231 inmates and a clerical staff of 32. For a brief time, the population had dropped to a little above 600, but then the current population explosion in prisons began, and the end seems nowhere in sight for state correctional facilities.

Over the years, Lorraine Kammermann became "Miss K" to uncounted Pontiac residents who sought her help or advice. From time to time some of them would send back notes, telling about their progress "outside" and writing "I'm married and we have a baby" or "I'm working and making so much a month."

"That makes you feel good," she says.

473 local couples divorced in 1975, impact is lifelong

"Like it or not, every one of us is affected by the divorces granted in our courts each day," in the opinion of a Granite City attorney, Marvin Barnes, who is among those handling part of the big volume of divorce cases.

Barnes believes that many divorces affect the overall economy by increasing welfare costs. When a husband does not pay child support, it forces the family to seek help through public aid agencies and, eventually, results in taxes being raised to meet those increases, he explains.

"Children usually suffer economic difficulties in obtaining a proper education," he adds, "and that's not including those who develop an emotional problem, which sometimes results from divorces."

Barnes says that when a couple "solves" its marital problems through divorce proceedings, the nation's employment is also affected, since the wife usually is forced to seek employment in order to support herself.

"I also believe that the nation's economic situation has an effect on the number of divorces."

"When poverty strikes a family, many times love goes out the window."

In the year just ended, 473 Quad-City area couples obtained divorce decrees in the Madison County Circuit Court. Three other local couples obtained annulments.

A total of 1,900 couples filed for divorce throughout Madison County, an increase of 82 over 1974.

Countywide, 1,379 couples were divorced.

Another 427 divorce cases were still pending in the courts as of Jan. 1, and 94 were dismissed during the year when those filing for divorce dropped the court action.

More couples who were married in July ended their marriage than those married in any other month of the year. Those married in the month of February obtained the fewest divorces in 1975.

One Quad-City area couple was married for 36 years, and another for only one week.

Due to the way the Illinois divorce law is written, mental cruelty was the principal charge in divorce suits, totaling 423, followed by 40 for desertion, four for physical cruelty, three for fraud, two for felony convictions and one for adultery. The courts restored former names to 83 Quad-City women. "Of the couples divorced, 231 had no children."

The remaining 242 Quad-City area couples divorced in 1975 had a combined total of 533 children.

"A truly accurate count of broken families is almost impossible," says Attorney Barnes, "because you would be surprised how many couples reunite and remarry each other."

As noted, 94 Madison County couples who filed for divorce in 1975 later settled their differences through means other than the courts.

A comparison of marriages and divorces during the first six months of last year shows 457 Quad-City area couples joined hands in matrimony while 192 couples were divorced during the same period.

Shot fired at car; boy may lose sight in eye

Dean Olive, 16, of 2108 Bryan Ave., was in satisfactory condition this week in Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, recuperating from facial injuries suffered during the weekend when someone fired a bullet into a car in which he was riding, shattering the windshield and pelting him with broken glass.

There is fear the boy may lose the sight in one eye as a result of the shooting.

The incident occurred on Chouteau Slough Road in about the 1200 block, about one-half mile south of Interstate 270, when Dean and his cousin, Glen Moore, of the 2600 block of Missouri Avenue, were picking up fireworks along the levee.

Another car with two young men in it drove beside Moore's auto and words were exchanged. Madison County sheriff's deputies were told. One man from the other car then got out and walked over to Moore's auto, firing a bullet into the windshield, Moore and Olive related.

The car then drove away. Moore drove to a brother's house and the brother, upon seeing Olive's injuries, advised them to go to St. Elizabeth Hospital. They did and Olive was examined and transferred to Barnes Hospital, where he was admitted.

Olive previously was injured in an accident between a car and an Amtrak passenger train more than a year ago on the West Pontoon Road crossing in which his sister was killed.

GC man beaten, robbed

Ferdinand Schmidt, 53, of 2125a rear Edison Ave., was severely beaten and robbed Monday night and was taken to Firmin Desloge Hospital after awakening in pain Tuesday morning.

Schmidt told police he was drinking at a tavern in the 2100 block of Grand Avenue Monday night and had called for a taxicab when a man offered him a ride.

He said he cancelled the request for the taxi and agreed to ride with the man. The next thing he remembered was awakening in the 1900 block of Edison Avenue, injured and with $17 missing.

He suffered abrasions to the left side of his face, a large bruise around his left eye, swelling around his mouth and abrasions to his forehead. His ribs and stomach also were sore, he said. He reported the injuries at 10:05 a.m. Tuesday. He went to St. Elizabeth Hospital at 4:15 p.m. Tuesday and was examined and transferred by ambulance to Firmin Desloge Hospital, St. Louis.

SHOTGUN STOLEN

Democrats claim balanced ticket

BY AL MANNING

SPRINGFIELD — Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley singlehandedly chose Michael Bakalis for the Democratic nomination for comptroller. Of course, Gov. Dan Walker says Daley handpicks the entire state, and many persons around the state believe Walker when he says that.

But if that is the case — and we do not think it is that simple — he at least does so with a broad consensus of other politicians.

In talking with dozens of the statemakers and most of the prospective candidates, we found virtually unanimous satisfaction with the shuffle which produced Michael J. Howlett for governor, Neil F. Hartigan for lieutenant governor, Alan J. Dixon for secretary of state and Cecil A. Partee for attorney general. We heard numerous minor complaints about Bakalis, however, and he was severely criticized in public by one of the Chicago ward committeemen.

How, then, did Bakalis end up on the ticket? Daley, our sources say, wanted Bakalis as a candidate because of his high name-recognition factor and his strong appeal to suburban voters.

He considers Bakalis to be a charismatic candidate who can articulate the issues of the Democratic Party, and he thinks he is particularly strong because of his stand on educational issues.

Bakalis' real strength lies in the fact he is strongest where the Democrats are the weakest — in the suburbs.

Although he is considered by many not to be a downstater, he is a former professor at Northern Illinois University at DeKalb, and he currently resides in Downers Grove, DuPage County.

DuPage is the second largest county in the state, and the chairman of the State Central Committee, House Speaker William Redmond of Bensenville endorsed Bakalis early in his bid for office.

Now for the criticism. Bakalis campaigned as an educator, not a politician, when he upset incumbent Supt. of Public Instruction Ray Page of Springfield in the 1970 election. His candidacy shows he is just another politician, out for any office he can get.

Some observers think he is a poor administrator, and they question whether he has any special ability or interest in the state's fiscal matters.

Many Democratic county chairmen are not comfortable with him, at least in part because he did not dabble as many Republicans as they would have liked.

That uneasiness surfaced only when Matthew Bieszcak, a ward committeeman in Chicago, blasted Bakalis in full view of the 400 or so in attendance. He said Bakalis told the organization in 1970 that he could raise his own campaign money but then asked for help. He said Bakalis pledged loyalty to the party and then did not follow through. He accused Bakalis of not supporting Daley at the 1972 Democratic convention.

Bakalis said Bieszcak was mistaken about his convention vote, and said that John Touhy, chairman of the State Central Committee, could confirm his position. Touhy made no move to do so, at least publicly.

But when they went behind closed doors, Chicago Alderman Ed Burke, an influential committeeman, made a strong pitch for Bakalis. He cited his energy, his vision and his 473,000 vote plurality (57 per cent) in 1970. Even Bieszcak, a Daley loyalist, pledged his wholehearted support.

Although Partee was the only real surprise to this reporter, others didn't think Partee would be on the ticket.

Partee does bring several assets to the campaign. A 20-year veteran of the legislature, his ability has been consistently recognized as he worked his way up to become senate president. With his experience, he is familiar with the workings of the attorney general's office.

Partee is black, which helps because Chicago Democrats have a reputation of favoring the Irish over blacks and other minorities. It helps particularly because of Daley's decision to dump Congressman Ralph Metcalfe, a popular black, in favor of another candidate for Congress.

His candidacy also clears a path for the mayor's son, Sen. Richard M. Daley, should he seek the senate presidency when it becomes vacant in January of 1977. Although Sen. Phil Rock, D-Chicago, appears to be in line for the top job, many observers think young Daley will get the nod and a bitter fight will erupt in the upper chamber.

Although Partee must be considered an underdog against incumbent Republican William J. Scott, this reporter has a hunch that Scott may end up not being a candidate for re-election.

Scott could win an appointment to a judgeship, perhaps the one being vacated by Appellate Judge John Paul Stevens, the nominee for the U.S. Supreme Court.

Even if Partee would lose, though, we suspect he would be given serious consideration for a Cabinet position in Washington should a Democrat be elected president.

Airman T. R. Smith aboard carrier

Navy Airman Thomas R. Smith, brother of Leroy Smith, 2320 Birch Ave., Granite City, has visited the United Kingdom while serving aboard the aircraft carrier USS Independence.

His ship, homeported at Norfolk, Va., currently is deployed with the U.S. Sixth Fleet and he and his shipmates are participating in a NATO training exercise. Titled "Ocean Safari," the exercise involves 17,000 men aboard 65 ships from 15 countries.

Earlier in the cruise, Smith was designated a "Bluesnoose," a traditional nautical title earned by sailors who have crossed the Arctic Circle, while taking part in a NATO exercise off the coast of Norway.

A 1972 graduate of Granite High School, he joined the Navy in July 1972.

All of the candidates talked about bringing balance to the ticket. So, for the record, here's how they do balance out:

GEOGRAPHY — three from Chicago, one from the suburbs and one from downstate (Belleville); AGE — one in his 60s, one in his 50s, one in his 40s and two in their 30s; RELIGION — two Catholics and three Protestants.

BISHOP'S REST. One of the attractions at Jubilee College State Park is the grave with its ornate marker of Bishop Philander Chase, who founded the college in 1839.

Historic college restored

By JOAN MURARO

PEORIA—Only about 15 miles northwest of the Peoria county seat is the site of one of the earliest educational undertakings in Illinois. Jubilee College, established to be the "glory of God" in 1839, and brought down by bad luck and the Civil War in 1862, during its brief history it owned some 4,000 acres of land, had a flock of 2,000 sheep, operated a sawmill and a flour mill, and offered a theological department, a college preparatory, a boy's preparatory school, and a girl's seminary. Though three attempts were made, after the Civil War, to reopen the college, none lasted for long. In 1933, the college and its grounds, which by then were down to 95 acres, were given to the state as a permanent memorial. The tract has now been increased to 1,530 acres, and the state conservation department is currently restoring the building both inside and out, to its original appearance.

Jubilee College was founded by Bishop Philander Chase, a New Hampshire native born to English parents 200 years ago. Before ordination he served as a missionary in remote stretches of New York state, learning to love the wandering mission service. He subsequently founded Christ Church in New Orleans, and served in Hartford, Conn., but turned to mission work in Ohio, where he founded Kenyon College, and became the first bishop of Ohio.

He retired in 1831 to Michigan, but four years later, at the age of 60, he was called to assume leadership of a new Episcopal diocese which included churches spread from Jacksonville, Rushville and Peoria to Chicago. Distressed at the lack of ministers, he traveled to England and raised funds to found an Episcopal seminary in Illinois. He brought his family from their Michigan farm to Peoria County and, in 1836, erected a log cabin he called the "Robin's Nest," because, he said, it was "made of mud and sticks and full of young ones." Within sight of this family cabin he located his school on a bluff overlooking the Kikapoo valley.

The cornerstone was laid in 1839 for the chapel which served the parish as well as the college. The doors opened in 1840, with an emphasis on sound education and an outstanding curriculum for its day.

Fees were $100 for a full year's tuition and board, but students unable to pay could still attend, aided by the college's thriving side businesses. In its brief history some students were graduated who later achieved prominence, among them James S. Ewing, who became ambassador to Belgium, and Adlai Stevenson, vice president in the second Cleveland administration.

In 1849 luck turned against the school. The mill burned down, Kikapoo creek flooded and most of the crops were lost. Bishop Chase died in 1852, and though the school stayed afloat for a while by selling off its land, it closed 10 years later.

Attractions at Jubilee College State Park, just north of U.S. Rt. 150 near Peoria, are the Bishop's grave site, and the college building, now being renovated. Of heavy native stone in Gothic style with a slender spire, it served the student body as well as the Lord, since a classroom was part of the structure, and a dormitory building was later attached to the structure. The dormitory offered small bedrooms, each with a double-decked bed, a library, and the post office, where Bishop Chase served as postmaster.

Today's visitors will find picnicking with a pavilion, picnic tables, stoves, water, and flush toilets. There are camping areas for tent and trailer camping, with a trailer disposal and some electricity. For hikers, several unmarked trails run through the wooded areas and the nearby Rock Island trail is managed from Jubilee College State Park, Kikapoo creek, running through the park, offers largemouth bass, bluegill, sunfish, channel catfish and carp.

As in all Illinois Conservation Department facilities, campers must obtain a permit from the ranger before entering camp grounds, and groups over 25 persons must make reservations in advance. Groups of minors must be accompanied by at least one responsible adult for each 15 youngsters.

Mine research center in state

Operational planning for a $1.5 million research station to be run by the U.S. Bureau of Mines began today in Carbondale, according to Sidney Marder, director of the division of energy of the Illinois Department of Business and Economic Development.

State and federal officials met at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale. Marder said he feels that "a main reason such a federal facility has been approved for Illinois is the establishment of a state coal extraction center at SIUC."

He continued, "The Bureau of Mines station will be a major advantage to future research on Illinois coal because mine safety and land reclamation studies, development of processes for secondary recovery, and means of increasing mine productivity will now be expanded within the state."

LOOT VACANT HOUSE

Two juvenile boys have been charged with disorderly conduct and two others are being sought in connection with the looting of a vacant building used for storage at 1914 Benton St., Tuesday afternoon. Four boys were seen walking near the building and one was carrying a box containing a toy building set, allegedly taken from the building. Police found the window in a side door broken and arrested two boys matching the description of youths seen leaving the yard.

Illinois prisoners increase by 1,600 in '75; 'less tension'

"Despite a sharp rise in state prison populations from 6,400 to 8,000 during 1975, there was a significant decrease in tension and violence in the department's institutions," Director Alvin R. Siefaff of the Illinois Department of Corrections said today.

Siefaff attributed an improved situation to the achievement of reforms on a number of fronts during the past year.

1. Better security management reduced the incidence of gang pressures and assaults by individuals.

2. Professionally conducted training of correctional officers and other staff was increased 50 per cent in 1975. The Correctional Training Academy provided 119,792 hours of formal training—70,992 over the previous year.

3. More humane living conditions resulted from continued physical plant renovations, including completion of electrical outlets in 2,725 cells and hot water systems in 3,700 cells. "Many of these installations were in institutions such as Joliet, Pontiac and Menard which had existed 100 years without such modern necessities," he commented.

4. Avenues for legitimate resolution of resident grievances were increased with expanded juvenile and adult advocacy services, administrative review board hearings and community legal representation.

Siefaff also cited as a highlight that Illinois has kept pace with a national trend of declining parole recidivism rates.

According to Uniform Parole Reports issued in 1975, parole violations totaled 14.8 per cent for releases during a one-year follow-up since 1973, as compared with 19.6 per cent in 1970.

Noting that reduced recidivism has been attributed by some researchers to the positive results of new programs, Siefaff said he is particularly pleased with the development of program innovations involving the cooperation of other agencies and the private sector.

Among the innovations listed were: a joint effort with the Department of General Services in opening a full-service state garage at the Stateville Correctional Center; medical services provided for the Joliet Correctional Center by local doctors in group practice.

The beginning of a statewide network of employment services for ex-offenders furnished by local agencies; the support of community colleges in providing academic and vocational training in juvenile and adult facilities.

Implementation of a four-phase drug abuse program at the Pontiac Correctional Center in conjunction with the Department of Mental Health and Dangerous Drugs Commission; assumption of full responsibility for the Unified Delinquency Intervention Service (UDIS).

Recruiting and training of volunteers by the Ministry of Criminal Justice to assist offenders and their families throughout their exposure to the criminal justice system; and formation of a 7th Step Foundation at the Joliet Correctional Center.

For the coming year, Siefaff said, one of the department's major goals will be the completion of "a comprehensive plan of action that deals both with the continued increases projected for prison populations, and the future of obsolete correctional institutions."

To develop the plan, the department contracted in November with the National Clearinghouse for Criminal Justice Planning and Architecture (NCCJPA), based at the University of Illinois.

Explorers plan 'Y' swim party

State awaiting 4.6 million tax returns

The director of the state agency that processes Illinois income tax returns said Wednesday that taxpayers expecting returns this year will get them sooner if their returns are filed early and accurately.

State Revenue Director Robert H. Alphin said the Department of Revenue expects to process 4.6 million personal income tax returns this year, a record number. More than 2.5 million people are expected to receive a tax refund.

The state revenue department, which processes returns on a first-come, first-served basis, is encouraging taxpayers to file early, Alphin noted.

"One reason is that the volume of returns continues to grow throughout the filing period," he said. "As that happens, the time it takes to process the returns increases."

prompt and proper filing."

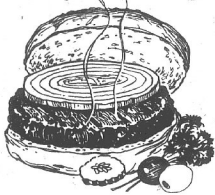

"Simple oversights are the cause of most errors. Common mistakes last year included failure to attach W-2 statements, transposition of digits in the Social Security number, and failure to sign the return."

Use of the checklist on the cover of this year's Illinois tax booklet, Alphin said, can help taxpayers avoid the most commonly made mistakes.

Alphin reminded taxpayers that assistance is available from district offices of the department in Champaign, Chicago, Wheaton, Rockford, Rock Island, Peoria, Springfield, East St. Louis, Marion and Lincolnwood. The department also has a toll-free telephone to handle requests for information and assistance—1-800-252-8972.

WHAT'S FAIR IS FAIR. If people visiting Rattlesplitter State Park in Lincoln, Ill., can amuse themselves watching the raccoons, the raccoons should be entitled to amuse themselves watching people, as this one appears to be doing. The little park's main attractions are its native birds and wildlife.

Illinois park recalls memories of Lincoln

Editor's Note: This is one of a series on Illinois' state parks and memorials.

By JOAN MURARO

SPRINGFIELD — "Just nature" is the chief charm of a little state park established only a few years ago, a short drive north from this capital city.

Located at the south edge of Lincoln, Rattlesplitter State Park surrounds the Lincoln State School Annex, and was in fact developed from a tract acquired in 1970 by the State Conservation Department from the Illinois Department of Mental Health, which operates the state school.

Development of the park began the following year. Presently Rattlesplitter State Park encompasses 740 acres. Native birds and wildlife abound in the tract which also is endowed heavily with oak, walnut, sycamore, ash, hackberry and hickory trees.

During fishing weather, fishermen can try for large and smallmouth bass, bluegill, sunfish, crappie, channel catfish, bullheads and carp in Salt Creek, which runs along the property. Canoeing is allowed on the river and those who work up hearty outdoor appetites watching the antics of the plentiful squirrels, rabbits and even raccoons, will find a number of secluded picnic areas with tables, outdoor stoves and toilets.

A long, looping nature trail winds around itself adjacent to Salt Creek, for visitors interested in nature hiking. There is a car top boat launch. The park can be entered off Ill. Rt. 66, either north or south of the state school.

For those whose interest in the raccoon and rabbit trails arises while, two other scenic sites managed by the State Conservation Department lie handily nearby.

In Lincoln itself is the reconstructed Postville courthouse, and at Mt. Pulaski is the Metamora courthouse. Both have associations with Abraham Lincoln from his days as a circuit rider.

The Metamora courthouse is one of two actual remaining court structures from the old Eighth judicial circuit. The other, for courthouse enthusiasts, is in Mt. Pulaski too.

The two structures are diametrically opposed in just about everything except their Lincoln ties. Metamora is authentic, is ranked as an excellent example of classic revival architecture and is noteworthy for its splendid use of native materials.

Designed and built in 1845 by a local contractor who baked his own bricks, felled timbers in a nearby forest and cut and hauled his own logs, the building cost $4,400 and remained in use as a county court seat until 1894. Thereafter the building was used for various public gatherings and became a state memorial in 1921 when a number of later "embellishments" were removed, to restore it to its classic appearance.

By contrast, the Postville courthouse, which cost $1,785 to build, is of a plain, uncompromising design with two stories, a stone foundation, a big chimney at each end, and walnut siding. The county seat was moved from Postville to Mt. Pulaski and then back to Lincoln, where the growing community finally reached out and encircled the Postville courthouse.

For many years the final owner of the site tried to get the county to take over the property, without success, and for some time it provided rent-free shelter to an impoverished family. In 1929, Henry Ford purchased it and moved the courthouse to Greenfield village at Darbort, Mich., a move which belatedly but without effect aroused local opposition to loss of the landmark.

The state acquired the site from the county in 1963 and began reconstruction at once — ironically, by obtaining plans from the original in Michigan.

As an historical note: it was at the Metamora courthouse Lincoln reportedly was in difficulty as he defended Melissa Goings, charged with killing her husband. During a recess she asked Lincoln where she could get a drink of water. He reportedly told her: "Tennessee has darn good water." She was never seen in Illinois again.

Versatile furniture can move to larger quarters

Q. I am graduating from college soon and expect to be furnishing my own first apartment. I have been saving to buy good furniture which I can use now and later, too, when I have larger quarters. I like a casual yet sophisticated and contemporary look but everything must be easy care and multipurpose because I cannot afford a very large apartment yet. — W.B.

rooms and patios in large quarters. Short sofas, too, are easily adaptable to apartment living (especially those handy sleeper sofas) and then they can go into a family room or guest bedroom at some later time.

Q. We have an ugly front door that is a red-orange wood now. What color would you suggest? The entire exterior of our home is a dark beige and windows are trimmed in the same color.

Our entry hall is in blue, yellow and green with lots of beige. — W.G.

A. If you wish to call attention to the front door you might choose a Wedgewood blue for the base color and then go over it with an antique glass which will soften it and cause it to blend nicely with the beige exterior. Or if you wish it to be less obtrusive you might paint the door a cream color and do the antique glass. Either should give you a pleasant entry.

Inductees' reunion planned

An unusual reunion will be held Saturday, Jan. 17, as about 22 Quad-City area men who were drafted together and served basic training together are being invited to a party in Granite City.

Fred McCollegan, 1609 Wellington Drive, who is host for the reunion, is seeking locations of about half those who served together in basic training at Fort Ord, Calif., after having been drafted together Sept. 30, 1966.

McCollegan recalls that on the date they were drafted, about 44 men from the Quad-Cities reported to Edwardsville for induction. They were divided into two groups, one which got on a small plane bound for Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., and the other on a jet which headed west.

"We knew when we got on that big jet we weren't headed for Fort Leonard Wood. We all ended up in Fort Ord and when we lined up for roll call, theyman who started taking the roll call recognized many of the names. "It turned out he was Larry Wofford of Granite City. As he recognized more and more names from Granite City, he asked us where we were from," McCollegan recalled.

"When he found out we were all from Granite City, he put us all in the same company and platoon, which wasn't easy, since many of us had different orders," he added.

All those who were drafted should have been discharged in September 1968, except those who may have reenlisted. After basic training, the platoon split in many different directions. McCollegan was sent to Vietnam, serving in Tay Ninh and Bechoa before completing his tour.

McCollegan said he is hoping those who were sent to Fort Ord together can be located and reunited. Wofford also is being sought for the party.

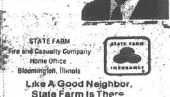

McCollegan said anyone knowing the whereabouts of anyone drafted on Sept. 30, 1966, and sent to Fort Ord, is requested to contact him at 877-4545.

Skills taught on TV 9

The art of playing the banjo, the selective buying of antiques and even an understanding of the functions of micro-processors are among the skills being offered on KETC-TV Channel 9 telecourses this season.

Channel 9 meets the onset of the Bicentennial with a number of series on different aspects of America. Besides the dramatic and historically enlightening "American Heritage" and "The Adams Chronicles," the nation is celebrated in two series on American art forms.

"Patchwork," which airs at 12 noon Sundays, is a study of the broad span of American folk music.

"Artists in America" presents in-depth portraits of contemporary artists, including Jules Peiffer, Peter Alexander and Roberta Flack, at 5:30 p.m. Sundays.

As a special gesture to 1976, Channel 9 is offering viewers' guides for all of these four programs for every new or renewed $20 membership.

Channel 9 is presenting a variety of craft courses in January.

"Busy Knitter's" Elizabeth Zimmerman is returning to guide viewers through the stages of making a sweater. This program will be shown at 2:30 p.m. Sundays.

"Magic of Oil Painting" is returning after numerous requests. Peter Alexander will be teaching his "wet on wet" technique at 9 p.m. Tuesdays.

A more contemporary craft, macrame, will be taught by a 21-year-old St. Louisan, Melissa Mills. This series, "Why Knot," will be shown at 2 p.m. Sundays.

Viewers' guides for these three craft courses also are offered as a special premium with new 1976 membership.

A number of self-help courses will air this season. "Consumer Survival Kit," which teaches consumer solutions for the individual, will air at 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays.

Ex-burglars teach the tricks of their trade in "Burglar Proofing" at 5 p.m. Fridays and 1:30 p.m. Sundays.

To teach people of all ages how to save money with their automobiles, a car-maintenance course, "What To Do Till The Wrecker Comes," will be shown at 10 p.m. Tuesdays.

Cooking instruction is covered by Joyce Chen and Justin Wilson. "Joyce Chen Cooks," Chinese cuisine adopted for the American kitchen, airs at 4 p.m. Sundays. "Cookin' Cajun" will air at 10 p.m. Wednesdays.

Justin Wilson will be at the Channel 9 studio for a get-together on Jan. 12. Interested members may contact Membership Services for free tickets.

"The Way It Was," which features highlights of great moments in sports history and interviews with the famous figures who took part, will be shown at 7 p.m. Thursdays.

"You—the Supervisor" is designed both for business supervisors who wish to enroll in groups and for the individual supervisor. It will be previewed at 4 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 10. The course begins in February.

Functions of small computers, which are coming into increased use, are taught in a special series. "Microprocessors" is telecast at 11:30 a.m. Saturdays and 6 p.m. Wednesdays.

Other Channel 9 telecourses starting in January include programs on antiques, home-making, typing, facial wrinkles and basic law. All courses have accompanying viewers' guides or books.

Free vocational tests at South

A free series of vocational testing will be offered Friday to seniors attending Granite City High School. The tests are known as the Armed Service Vocational Aptitude Battery.

The testing is on a voluntary basis and results of the tests will be reviewed with the student by the school counselors for vocational guidance.

There is no obligation by the student to the military and the tests are being offered strictly as a community service, according to James Durnell, school principal. The same series of tests was offered at North in November.

Planning advances for building at Chouteau

Plans for a Chouteau Township building to be used as a combination Town Hall and Community Center are beginning to take shape rapidly as the Town Board of Auditors and the township's Community Development Committee have reached agreement on the general layout of the building and are beginning to consider its furnishings.

John Rapp of Alton, architect of the proposed building, met Monday night with the town board and with the Community Development Committee to present a proposed floor layout and to discuss building materials.

Rapp noted that he had been asked to design a building which could be constructed for about $22 per square foot and presented plans for a 60 by 85 foot building which would contain a 60 by 60 foot open area for community activities and a 60 by 25 foot area for township office space.

He said one contractor had roughly estimated the could construct the building for $22.11 per square foot, a total of about $112,761.

"There is no degree of extravagance here and for trying for a building costing $22 per square foot, I don't know how you're going to get any closer," Rapp told those present.

The township is financing the building with a combination of federal revenue sharing funds and its Community Development grant allocations over the three-year period of the Community Development Program.

It is estimated Community Development grants over the three years will total $81,000 ($12,500 has been received thus far), and revenue sharing allocations will total $38,000 for an estimated $119,000 available to construct the building.

Due to the uncertainty about the future of federal revenue sharing and rising construction costs, the township has agreed to construct and furnish the building for about $120,000.

Rapp explained Monday night that the proposed building would be a "pre-engineered" building with all the supports, cross-supports and roof being pre-cut to be assembled easily. All supports will be along the walls with no center posts in the open area. The material to be used for the walls has not been determined, but concrete blocks filled with insulation may be the most practical, due to the durability of concrete as opposed to metal or plasterboard. A brick layer outside also was proposed.

A rectangular shape was chosen as the most economical shape to construct, although it does have disadvantages with echoes. To assist the sound within the building, a high ceiling of about 16 feet is being planned. The ceiling height also will give heat and smoke somewhere to go without making persons uncomfortable when the center is full, it was explained.

Rapp suggested a committee be appointed to seek donations for some of the buildings' furnishings, using a Bicentennial theme.

He said the committee could prepare a plaque for the front of the building noting it was constructed during our nation's 200th birthday and listing the names of persons who made donations to help furnish it. "You also can use the Bicentennial theme to obtain volunteer work and trees for landscaping and decorating. He said money can not be donated to the township to help furnish the building, but the citizens' committee can collect money and purchase furnishings or other items for the building, donating them to the township.

Betty Lavelle was selected to head the committee which will seek donations. Rapp congratulated the township on its foresight in selecting a site large enough for the town hall and community center building, the township garage building, enough room for outdoor recreational activities and enough surplus land for future expansion. He said it would be wise for other communities to follow Chouteau Township's example.

Walter "Dick" Sparks, supervisor of Chouteau Township, said the township also has been congratulated by the Community Development officer personnel in Edwardsville as having selected "one of the most practical uses for the money."

He said the money is being used, "To place a permanent building to Chouteau Township and to show we did endeavor to get something for the long-standing good of our people, without having to tax the people."

It was noted the community building is expected to be used by scout troops, the Mill Creek Athletic Club, senior citizens, the amateur radio club, the handicapped, labor unions and for showers, weddings and regular Saturday night community dances.

A meeting of the Community Development committee and Rapp was set for Monday, Feb. 2, at 7 p.m. to discuss additional plans for the building. The meeting will be at the township offices at 825 Thorngate Drive, Mitchell.

Broadway job progressing

The Broadway relocation project should be finished by July, Mayor William Ebersold of Venice told the Venice Rotary Club at its Wednesday noon meeting in the Madison Recreation Center.

"When the late Mayor Lee was elected in 1957, one of the big items he wanted completed was the Broadway improvement and overpass," was in a meeting Monday with state transportation people and the contractor to find out just where we stand on time and money on the project.

"We have another meeting Friday. Even though the contractor has had some problems and the dewatering helped slow things down, the end of the relocation is-in sight," Ebersold said.

The mayor, who was the guest speaker at the club, addressed himself to city finances. "I think every city in America is having financial problems of different degrees and when the cities only have limited income there is only so much you can do. We watch our money close in Venice and our department heads are doing a good job in making purchases."

"I hope we never have to raise taxes in Venice as long as I am mayor. Federal revenue sharing has been a real boon to cities. We all will be in real trouble when we lose that, and I am not too sure how long we can count on those funds.

"It boils down to the simple fact that our income needs to be managed real close," he said. "I don't want to say too much here as he'll ask for a raise, but our young Rotarian and my administrative assistant who is sitting here in front of me, Tom Fields, has been doing a very fine job for the people and the city of Venice."

"We also are fortunate in having a fine young man in Duane Georgeff, managing our bridge. "We may only have 4,700 people in Venice, but they are really fine people. I believe we offer excellent city services and thanks to our 16-man police force, ours is a safe city."

"Our sewers have been giving us some problems. We did some work on them last summer and we need to do some work on some of our streets. We are one of eight cities that the government has assigned an engineering team to do a street and sewer study and if everything works out the way we want, we will be doing some major sewer and street repair work with the government, paying about 80 per cent of the tab," Ebersold said.

"The club celebrated the birthdays of Rotarians Mike Sasyk and Roy Jackson.

Howlett to meet with labor officials in area

Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett, a Democratic candidate for governor, will meet with a group of labor leaders from the Southern Illinois area at a luncheon at the Round Table Restaurant, Collinsville, Saturday at noon.

The gathering is at the invitation of Joseph L. McGhee, assistant business manager, Plumbers and Pipefitters Local 555.

"Mike Howlett has been an outstanding public servant and a longtime friend of the laboring man," McGhee said. "This luncheon will give a large group of labor leaders, covering a broad area in the state starting south of Springfield, a chance to meet him."

"Mike Howlett has always been sensitive to human needs; he has the strength of character the office of the governor demands. "The core of the area represented by the men we have invited to meet him involves the second most populous area in the state."

"Howlett is no ivory tower liberal; he knows the problems of the working man. He knows that this area has been allowed to stagnate under an administration that is far more interested in keeping itself in power than in facing up to our drastic economic problems. We need jobs here, and we need them badly."

Secretary of State Howlett will be introduced by Sen. Sam M. Vadalabene, who is coordinating the Howlett gubernatorial campaign for 12 Southern Illinois counties.

"This area has some of the severest employment problems in the country," Vadalabene said. "Mike Howlett is the man to attack them."

"I once worked for him when

Less than 20% of all Lambert users from Missouri, part of St. Louis area

Because "incorrect claims continue to be made about passenger usage at Lambert Field," the St. Louis Metropolitan Area Airport Authority has directed that a report be prepared to analyze actual St. Louis passenger boardings.

"The Authority acted because of the continuing implication by Lambert proponents that 90 per cent of Lambert's users are Missouri residents of the St. Louis region," an SLMAAA spokesman said.

The staff report describes the findings of an "on board" survey of air travelers at Lambert.

It was conducted in 1972 by Arnold Thompson Associates, aviation consultants, in cooperation with the airlines operating at Lambert. The survey was sponsored by the Authority.

The study counted passengers actually on aircraft as they departed from Lambert. It was found that 77 per cent — or more than three fourths — of all passengers were from places other than the St. Louis metropolitan area.

Only 23 per cent identified themselves as being residents of the St. Louis area.

"There is every reason to believe that the results would be essentially the same if the survey were repeated now. Thus, the repeated assertion by some supporters of Lambert Field that 90 per cent of the users are Missouri residents is a grave error," the spokesman said.

"Moreover, it is an error that does untold harm."

"First, it grossly distorts and downgrades the role of St. Louis as one of the major hub air centers in the nation's air transportation system."

"Second, the error tends to reinforce other misleading emotional appeals in an opinion climate that is continually infused with misinformation about the entire airport question."

"What the on-board survey showed was that not only did St. Louis area residents account for less than one-fourth of Lambert users — and not 90 per cent plus as the pro-Lambert claims would infer — but also that St. Louis area residents actually accounted for the smallest proportion of all measured categories."

"The three other categories — which are standard classifications in airport usage analysis — are (1) transfer passengers, who change planes at Lambert, (2) through passengers, who are on planes that land at Lambert before continuing the through flight, and (3) non-resident originating passengers, who board flights in St. Louis to return to some other area such as Chicago, New York, Los Angeles or Houston.

The majority of users, those who indicated in the survey that they did not live in the St. Louis area, were in three different classifications, as follows:

(a) "52.2 per cent of all passengers were non-residents who were originating at St. Louis. (For example, business travelers returning to Chicago, New York, etc., from a trip to St. Louis.)"

(b) "26.6 per cent of all passengers on board were transfer passengers who simply changed airplanes at Lambert. (c) "23.2 per cent were through passengers who did not change planes. Like the transfer passengers, they did not leave the terminal while in St. Louis."

"Only 23 per cent of the on-board passengers identified themselves as residents of the St. Louis region."

"Expressed another way, of every 100 passengers, 77 are not residents of the St. Louis area. Only the remaining 23 are from the St. Louis metropolitan area."

"Missourians did make up the biggest segment of the 23 per cent of all airport users who identified themselves as St. Louis area residents, constituting 86 per cent of the area total."

"Put another way, this means that less than 20 per cent of all Lambert users are from the Missouri portion of the St. Louis region."

"Thus, the general interest of all air travelers — including Missourians — must be given primary consideration in choosing an airport site.

"In contrast with the 23 per cent area users, the largest single classification of the four categories of Lambert users was transfer passengers, accounting for nearly 27 of every 100 users."

"It is as a transfer center that St. Louis can and should play an increasingly important role as an air center."

"This role is important to an efficient national air transportation system and also to helping turn around the sagging economy of the St. Louis area."

"One of Atlanta's principal advantages — outstanding air transportation — comes because of its role as a transfer center."

"Fewer than 20 per cent of those using the Atlanta airport are residents of the Atlanta area — and yet they enjoy an enormous range of travel advantages created by the heavy schedules of planes landing at Atlanta because of its importance as a transfer point."

"It is this kind of air transportation superiority that St. Louis area residents and businesses can enjoy if the region gets an airport capable of handling the potential traffic."

"It is this kind of superiority that the St. Louis area can offer businesses from other areas that are considering new locations or are deciding where to expand present operations," the spokesman concluded.

New cab firm is authorized

Establishment of a new taxicab business in Granite City, starting with three or four cabs operating out of a cab stand at 1414 Twenty-first Street, was authorized by the Granite City Council during a regular meeting Monday night.

The approval was granted on a motion by Alderman Clyde Boyd after Chief of Police Ronald Veizer reported that the police department would have no objection to a cab operation from that location so long as the operator understands parked cabs would have to use the parking meters in front of the cab stand.

Veizer, to whom the council referred a request for operation of the cab firm when it was made Dec. 22, said that the original proposal to operate from an office at 24th Street and Washington Avenue was not approved by him because the space was too small. The new location at 1414 Twenty-first Street was substituted and should prove adequate, Veizer said.

The new cab firm will be operated as the Checker Cab Co. by Vernon McEntyre of Granite City who told the council Monday night only cabs in good mechanical condition will be used.

Authorization to operate a new cab firm—the second in Granite City—followed within two weeks a request by the operator of Dave's Cab Co., 1920 State Street, that extensive changes be made in the ordinance regulating cab operations to increase the firm's profit margin and, among other things, to give the company exclusive rights to "operate cabs and handle all the business in the Tri-Cities area."

Alderman Roy Poulos asked McEntyre if he believed there is enough business for two cab firms in Granite City. McEntyre replied that if the proper service is given, more persons would use cabs.

Ronald Coleman, alderman of the Seventh Ward, outlined several complaints he had received during the past week concerning cab service.

Maragides in delegate race; backs Mondale

Steve Maragides, 1020 Grand Ave., Madison, filed nominating petitions at Springfield Wednesday as a candidate for delegate to the Democratic convention to be held in New York City this summer.

Maragides said his preference for the Democratic nomination for president of the United States is Minnesota Senator Walter F. Mondale.

"Sen. Mondale was a front runner for the Democratic nomination before he decided not to actively seek it. However, I believe that he would accept a draft in the event there is a deadlocked convention, and I believe there will be a deadlocked convention," Maragides said.

He continued, "Sen. Mondale is the kind of young liberal that needs to be the Democratic standard-bearer. He could and should be elected president of the United States."

Maragides stated that Minnesota Sen. Hubert Humphrey is too old for the nomination. "If Sen. Humphrey were elected this year, he would be 73 years old at the end of his second term. At the appropriate time, Sen. Humphrey should endorse my Minnesota colleague, Sen. Mondale," Maragides said.

Maragides also will be on the ballot as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Madison County state's attorney.

Mayor Paul Schuler of Granite City, notified of Mr. Nonn's death early yesterday afternoon, said that his passing "leaves a void which will be difficult to fill."

He cited Mr. Nonn for "the longest continuous service to Granite City as an alderman in the city's history" and said there have been a great many changes in the city while Mr. Nonn was an alderman in which he had a key part.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Roger (Diana) Northland, and a sister, Mrs. Carrie Hensen, both of Granite City, and one grandson.

Funeral arrangements are given in the obituary column.

Programs to aid local consumers

By VALERIE EVENDEN

Press-Record Staff Writer
Buying wisely, whether "shopping" for credit or everyday items such as food and clothing, plus consumer protection information, are subjects being explored in an ongoing series of topical meetings scheduled to resume next week in the Quad-City area.

The series is being conducted by representatives of Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, assisted by trained aides from this community, according to Dr. Rowena Lutz, director of the SIUE Consumer Information Project.

Financed with a Title I grant from the Illinois Board of Higher Education, the consumer information service primarily is geared to low-income persons, but the comprehensive monthly programs can help individuals and families of all income levels, the program sponsors noted.

The first session of the new year is set for 6 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 14, at the Madison County EOC Neighborhood Center, located at Madison Avenue and Second Street, Madison.

Featured speaker at the initial meeting will be Mrs. Jo Meyer, consumer information representative for Illinois Power Co. Her topic, "Energy Conservation," will explore procedures which can result in saving dollars and energy resources.

Dr. Lutz explained the overall program as "taking into the community information about consumer problems—(by providing) staff assistance to work with small groups or with individuals who would like information about Consumer Education, Consumer Protection and resources available within Madison and St. Clair counties that will help the consumer."

Local residents now employed to work as staff assistants in the Quad-Cities include Mrs. Jewell Young, Mrs. Ada Walker, Mrs. Elizabeth Payne, Mrs. Elva Ortiz, Bill Gathright and Mrs. Kay Hoffman.

Earlier community meetings have featured films, guest speakers and discussions about the needs and rights of consumers.

Credit collection procedures and "stretching the food dollar" techniques also were among the presentations made since the series started last fall.

Through the program, community consumer aides are trained to go into individual homes and work directly with a homemaker on a one-to-one basis, Dr. Lutz said. Much of the information provided by the aides is not easily available to a homemaker from other sources.

Objectives of the program are to develop skills in such areas as budgeting, deciding what to buy and where and when to buy it, and information about textiles, clothing, appliances, furniture and housing.

Beside one-to-one counseling, the individual can learn through the films, speakers and group meetings and discussions, Dr. Lutz said.

Information concerning nutrition and food economics is available and emphasis is placed on credit resources and consumer protection agencies.

By example, Dr. Lutz offered a concise version of one aspect of the Consumer Information Service's programs—Applying for Credit.

"When a person applies for credit his very first task, he or she is on the way to maintaining a financial tool that can serve him well over the years."

"The lending agency, whether a bank, loan company, department store or other sources will request certain information."

"The person will have to divulge certain data about himself, such as size of family, source of income, amount of income, and an assessment of outstanding debts he may have."

"After securing the above information, and other items, the lending agency will determine if the applicant is a credit risk. If not, he is turned down for credit at that time."

"Some credit counselors believe that it is best to tell the person that credit is deferred a few months until other obligations are out of the way. Others will make the loan, or finance a purchase, knowing the specific purchase will be a burden to repay."

"If a consumer would listen to and follow the advice of a creditor at this point, he may have many hours of anguish in the future when payments are harder to make and the joy of buying the item is gone."

"An individual should be willing to 'shop' for credit. He needs to look for the cost of credit; the length of time the credit is needed; and the various interest rates and repayment plans available."

"Then, and only then, should he sign that dotted line," Dr. Lutz emphasized.

Spend 39th New Year's together

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan F. Harrison, 2550 Chelsea Blvd., and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Walker, 2450 Iowa St., celebrated New Year's Eve together for the 39th consecutive year.

Through the years, the two couples have alternately visited the others' home and, in earlier years, listened to the radio for the arrival of the New Year.

They now watch television during the evening and also enjoy playing cards, Mrs. Harrison said.

Both Harrison and Walker are retired state of Illinois employees. The former worked as an auditor and still offers income tax service at his home, a business he has operated since 1957.

Mr. Walker, a state license examiner prior to retiring, now issues licenses for automobiles, plates and titles.

ASK THE DOCTOR

New illness hits taste and smell

By WILLIAM J. GOLDWAG, M.D.

Dear Doctor,

Two months ago, I contracted a rather unusual type of virus which was quite stubborn to yield to medication. It was a prolonged recuperation of almost two months when I contracted what turned out to be a bad sinus infection. I still have not gotten back any trace of my sense of smell or taste. I wonder whether they will ever return now that this length of time has elapsed. There have been a couple of occasions when I tasted a butterscotch piece of candy but nothing else. I could not even smell even if my home were burning. Any information you may be able to furnish would be greatly appreciated.

A. Everyone has experienced the loss of taste and smell that accompanies a cold or stuffed up nose. It is true that generally everything comes back to normal shortly after the cold clears up. In fact, that's often how you know that everything is clearing up. You suddenly smell the flowers in the house (or the cabbage on the stove). In recent years, a new illness has been recognized in which disorders of taste and smell are the major problems. Often they follow a respiratory infection but sometimes even occur without any preceding virus. Usually nothing is found on examination to explain the symptoms. A number of these patients were found to have lower than normal zinc levels in the serum. Subsequent treatment with zinc supplements proved successful in many of these patients and it is safe and well worth trying when weeks go by with no spontaneous improvement.

Dear Doctor,

Can arteries in the neck be cleaned out safely? Can both sides of the neck be done? What are the dangers of this surgery? Is it recognized all over or just in certain cases and states? Is there any guarantee of success? Are consultations needed? A. The major usefulness of this operation in which the carotid artery (the large artery alongside the windpipe which supplies most of the blood to the brain) is opened up and cleaned out, is in cases which are starting to show symptoms of a possible stroke coming on. It can be dramatically successful in these patients who usually have brief episodes of paralysis or blindness or loss of power in an arm or leg. These are called transient ischemic attacks (ischemic meaning decreased blood supply). If the symptoms and examinations point to a partially blocked carotid artery, the surgery can be lifesaving. Unfortunately too often the operation is performed on someone who has a vague symptom like dizziness or ringing in the ears and no relief occurs after surgery. The major risk is that a piece of clot or debris may break off the artery wall during the procedure and land in a branch of the artery in the brain and may cause the very stroke it is intended to prevent. Because of this risk, only one side is done at a time in case they are both diseased. The surgery is recognized and performed in all parts of the country. If there is any doubt about the diagnosis or the risks to the patient, consultation should be obtained preferably from a physician who is not in the surgical field. Many patients with partly blocked carotid arteries can live long, useful lives using other nonsurgical methods to increase blood flow to the brain.

HEALTH'S-A-POPPIN'

When a headache isn't all in your head

By MARION WEISS

Each year some 20 million or more Americans find headaches enough of a pain in the head to send them seeking a physician's help. Even if you aren't part of that head-splitting statistic, there are probably times when you wouldn't mind taking your head off temporarily until the hurt goes away.

You can't, of course, but putting your finger on factors which trigger your headaches can improve the chances of heading off future pain. Also, the all-too-common chronic "tension" or "muscle-contraction" headache may be surprisingly susceptible to relaxation techniques.

If headaches are repeatedly associated with exposure to a particular substance or environment, physicians may suspect sensitivity to chemicals or pollutants you eat, breathe, clean your house with or work around. Avoiding them may spare you a pain in the head. Among substances which may trigger headaches in susceptible sufferers are "hot dog headaches" from sodium nitrite in various processed meats, the flavor enhancer monosodium glutamate (MSG), sensitivity to a particular food or drug, and fumes from paint or such household chemicals as detergents, waxes, ammonia or furniture polish.

Air pollutants may also play a role. One study found that heavy smokers, and those with "dusty jobs" or other continual dust exposure, were more prone to headaches.

Tension that gives you a pain in the head may not be "all in your mind." You can help trigger or aggravate such a headache by holding long periods in positions which get neck, facial and scalp muscles "up tight." Try rearranging your desk in such a way that tasks are done in different positions.

A study recently reported in "The Medical Journal of Australia" suggests that a combination of mental and muscular relaxation techniques may help some of us reduce the frequency or severity of "tension" or even migraine headaches. Twenty-five patients, some migraine and others muscle-contraction headache sufferers, received a 20-minute training session weekly for four weeks and were encouraged to practice daily on their own. Six months later, 19 patients were substantially improved and 17 "...either reduced or dispensed with their medication."

Severity of a headache does not reliably indicate the seriousness of the cause. Take no chances! Consult your physician promptly concerning any type of headache which persists, keeps recurring, comes on suddenly and seemingly without cause, or is associated with personality changes or other unfamiliar symptoms, particularly ones connected with the senses or consciousness. It's particularly important to check promptly with your doctor if headache occurs after a blow or injury to the head, regardless of the length of time between injury and symptoms.

A final note. Some people can get a headache if their blood sugar drops too low. Not letting yourself get too hungry and including protein in meals and snacks may help maintain a more stable blood sugar level.

TAX FACTS IRS publications aid self-employed

Q. I work for myself, operating a small business with no outside help. How do I file my income tax return and pay Social Security? — H.W.
A. Income from this form of business is a part of the total gross income received by the individual. As a sole proprietor you must report the income from your business on Schedule C (Form 1040), entering the amount of the "income or loss" as a item on your Form 1040. Sole proprietors are liable for self-employment Social Security tax which provides coverage for persons working for themselves. If you have net earnings of $400 or more per year, file Form SE, 1040 (explanation of this form can be found in Pub. No. 334 and No. 533). Also a sole proprietor is required to file a declaration of estimated tax and to make estimated tax payments, if he has $500 net earnings. This is Form 1040-ES, which contains instructions, and vouchers. Read the form for filing dates and other information. Contact the IRS if you need further explanation.

Q. A neighbor and I are dreamers. In order to supplement our income, we have been sewing for other people. We know we should pay taxes. Would this be classified as a partnership? If so, what forms should we use? — M.F.

A. A partnership is not a taxable entity; the income is taxable to the individual partners. Every partnership doing business in or having income from sources within the United States, is required to file Form 1065, "U.S. Partnership Return of Income," for its tax year. Pub. No. 541 explains this form and its use. Check the instructions for this form, or with the IRS, for the appropriate filing deadlines for your tax year. Each partner reports his or her distributive share (whether or not actually distributed) of partnership "income or loss," on their personal income tax returns from information on Schedule K, Form 1065, issued by the partnership.

Q. I have a small jewelry business in my home. In order to expand, I must look for larger quarters. I am considering incorporating my business. Can you give me information as to how the income is reported? — H.G.

A. Every corporation must file an income tax return regardless of the amount of its income, unless expressly exempt, on Form 1120, "U.S. Corporation Income Tax Return." The Pub. No. 542, "Corporations and the Federal Income Tax," provides a full, illustrated explanation. Exempt corporations file on Form 990 (see instructions to Form 990). Corporate profits are taxable to corporations, except those which elect not to be taxed as corporations, but rather as Subchapter-S Corporations. Subchapter-S shareholders include their distributive portions of the corporate profits in their individual gross incomes. Form 1120-S, "U.S. Small Business Corporation Income Tax Return," is filed by this type of corporation. For details, read Pub. No. 589 and instructions for 1120-S. Contact the IRS Taxpayer Service Division, if further explanation is required.

BOOKS Seven steps to success

WHY SHOULD I HIRE YOU? by Melvin R. Thompson; Venture Press; 299 pages; $11.95.

Reviewed By FRANK MACOMBER

In these days when the nation's unemployment rate hovers between 8 and 9 percent of the labor force, along comes this uncommon approach to a common problem for millions of Americans:

"Where can I find a job, especially the one I want?" Thompson, who calls himself an authority in career management, already has a good track record for his unusual approaches to getting the right people and the right jobs together.

Still a young man, the author already has had three separate careers: mortgage banking, health-care facilities and career management, his present bag.

On pages which leave room in the margins for personal note-making, Thompson seeks to strip away what he calls the foolishness of traditional job-hunting — answering classified ads, sending out detailed resumes, etc.

Instead he offers the reader — man or woman — seven steps toward a successful career, either in the business you're already in or in another.

Thompson believes his book can be the key to opening doors for the unemployed, the underemployed, the misemployed and the overemployed. And, the author insists, it offers as much knowledge to the college graduate as to the seasoned veteran in the job market.

Thompson's dos and don'ts about how to survive a job interview are enlightening and some even are amusing.

For example, he suggests that the job hunter "set a definite date for the next interview, or ask for leads if you bomb out."

On the don't side, the author cautions the career seeker not to "complain about anything, not the weather, not your industry, not your former employer and not your personal problems."

And, he adds, "Don't talk money, if you can avoid it, until after you receive at least a tentative job offer."

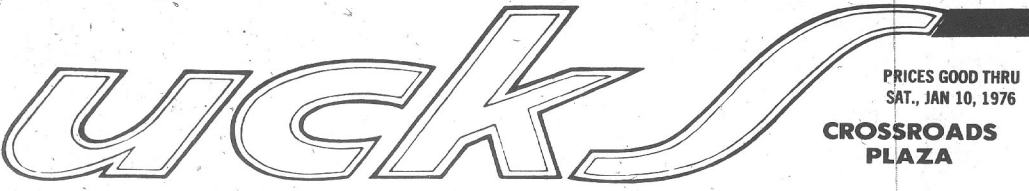

The longest of Thompson's don'ts warns against flirting or getting personal with anyone in the company you want to join.

"The interviewer probably knows his secretary a lot better than you think he does," the author points out. "You can also bet that she will pass along some sort of opinion about you to her boss. And that opinion may be crucial. If she doesn't like your personality, you could be in trouble."

Not all of Thompson's advice and his seven steps to success are new. But he puts them down in an easy-to-understand sequence for the job hunter.

While no amount of tutoring is an "open sesame" for a job, you'll be better equipped to go foraging for one if you read this book. And remember, Thompson cautions, "Don't talk like an Indian if you're being interviewed by a chief."

'Presidential special' menus add to spirit of '76 at SIUE

by Annice Brave

Since President Ford asked each community to plan its own Bicentennial activities, many unique and entertaining methods of celebrating our nation's birthday have sprung up across the country. Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville is into the "Spirit of '76" and has planned Bicentennial exhibits and celebrations throughout the year.

But the celebration with the most "flavor" is taking place each day in the SIUE University Club dining room. SIUE Food Service, under the direction of Bill Crabb, offers daily menus containing special selections from presidential cookbooks.

Pat Bowles, a food management trainee at SIUE, prepared the 38 menus with help from Crabb and other members of the Food Service staff. She said the idea of having menus from presidential cookbooks came about through discussions of revising the University Club menu.

"Mr. Crabb had instructed me to decide which items on the old menu we would delete and which items we would keep," Mrs. Bowles said. "The idea of having Bicentennial menus kept going through my mind."

"When I suggested having presidential specials, we all thought it might be a bit too ambitious for us to prepare in the time we had," she continued. "Our staff has devoted hundreds of hours to researching presidents, their menus, the way they entertained and noteworthy achievements during their terms." After research was done, Mrs. Bowles would submit a short paragraph containing information about each president with a special menu item to Crabb. He would then decide if it would be economically possible for the University's kitchen to prepare, and he made his own menu suggestions.

DEFINITELY OLD NEWS -- The "Campus Chronicle," the special Bicentennial menu for the University Club of Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, contains facts from the past, historical anecdotes about such topics as affairs of the heart and the social graces are on its cover along with a history of Madison and St. Clair Counties. Each day a different U.S. president is honored with a special historical paragraph and menu on the front cover. Other menu selections are listed inside the "Chronicle."

After a final selection was made, Crabb and his workers would convert these recipes, usually written for six to eight people, into "quantity recipes" and then "cost it out." To "cost out" a recipe, Food Service determines how much to charge to cover costs for each dish.

Mrs. Bowles said that not all of the presidential selections came from presidential or first ladies' cookbooks. For several administrations, she researched various events that occurred during a presidency which could be tied in with the menu.

For instance, during the administration of Abraham Lincoln, Thanksgiving was proclaimed a national holiday. Therefore, the Lincoln special was a traditional Thanksgiving feast.

Cultural backgrounds of certain presidents are also reflected in the menus. The selection honoring Andrew Jackson, who was born and reared in the South, included "Old Hickory" nut soup.

Mrs. Bowles admitted that during her research, she did develop some presidential favorites. Thomas Jefferson really impressed her because she found that not only was he a statesman but an inventor, architect and writer.

President Cleveland's first lady also holds a special appeal for Mrs. Bowles. "President Cleveland married 24-year-old Frances Folsom a year after he was elected," she said. "Following his defeat in 1888 to Harrison, his wife stated to the White House staff, 'We are coming back just four years from today.' Four years later, Cleveland was re-elected president and

BITS OF THE PAST AT SIUE -- Pat Bowles, a management trainee for Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville Food Service, points to plaques commemorating the Presidential Specials served in the University Club dining room. Each plaque contains information about the 38 U.S. presidents and a special menu from either a presidential cookbook or a menu chosen due to a noteworthy achievement during the president's administration.

they returned."

The special University Club menu, the "Campus

Chronicle," will offer presidential specials along with other lunchtime favorites throughout the open weekdays from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and The University Club is 4 to 7 p.m.

Americana look for Bicentennial

Q. We have recently moved into a home that has a Spanish colonial exterior. However, the interior does not repeat the Spanish influence and this is fortunate because I like formal 19th Century Americana. Please suggest how I might treat our dining room walls and floor as well as windows for an appropriate yet dramatic background for a lovely Sheraton dining set and sideboard. Our living room and entry hall are done in blues, rose, lemon yellow and white. The dining room floor is exposed wood which I wish to keep. Should I add a rug under the table or leave it without? -- W. T.

A. I think one of the most effective ways of creating an authentic early American look in a dining room is with wallpaper. And you are indeed fortunate you are looking now because many of the wallpaper manufacturers are bringing out elegant and very interesting American designs in observance of America's Bicentennial celebration. The exciting thing is that not only can you find an authentic print and design but with modern manufacturing technology you can find these in colors that will most beautifully blend with your own color scheme.

If you wish to go to the extra trouble and expense you might consider adding a chair rail in your room, painting below the rail and papering above.

Give care to the selection of a dramatic lighting fixture which you may hang over your table and will be in comparable quality to your furniture. Add a dimmer so you can control the brightness of the light.

The matter of a rug in a dining room is truly a personal matter. I'd suggest you first see how you like the dining room without one. Then if it seems too cold, you would be able to add something. From a practical viewpoint rugs are difficult to keep clean in a dining room but they are luxurious and acoustically desirable.

Q. I would like your suggestions on colors to go with what I already have. I have white walls, beige rug, a deep blue sofa and chair and two big windows in the living room with white curtains. The room is 28 feet long and furniture is all walnut. Now I need a new rug wall to wall. I have two armless chairs and one large chair which need upholstering. -- L. T.

A. If you will be working with white walls, white curtains and a deep blue sofa, I would suggest you might like a blue, white and rust color scheme that can be very warm and inviting. You might start with a rust color rug and then choose a rust, blue and white floral pattern for your armless chairs. You could do the large chair in a stripe of rust and white or blue and white and repeat the stripe or the floral pattern (whichever you prefer) at your windows with a box covering the top of your curtains. Or you could do side drapes in the fabric, too.

ASSEMBLY LINE for Japo '76 Chocolate fudge Company places the finished product into pans and covers them, cools the fudge and then it is ready for sale. Junior Achievement companies learn all aspects of business with emphasis on learning by doing.

JA company reaches new sales record

Japo '76, a Junior Achievement company sponsored by American Steel Foundries, reached a record $2,000 in sales this week with its chocolate fudge product.

The company, consisting of high school students, was formed in October with capital raised through the sale of stock. Top salesmen and amount of sales are Chris Jacobson, $300; Laura Crader, Rita Henderson and Karen Ozbun, each $200, and Sheila Hintz and Tom Mueller, each $100.

The members of Japo '76 make their product each Tuesday evening at the Junior Achievement Center, 3307 Wabash Ave., under the guidance of Lacey Randolph and Vince Lohman, both employees of American Steel.

Officers of the Japo '76 company are Tom Mueller, president; Karen Ozbun, vice-president of sales; Tim Grant, vice-president of manufacturing; Mike Bell, vice-president of personnel; Sheila Hintz, treasurer; Mark Hunter, secretary; and Marsha Jackson, safety director.

Plans are being made to participate in a Trade Fair to be held in February at St. Clair Square in Fairview Heights where the company will sell its fudge.

Teen-agers in Junior Achievement (JA) meet for two hours, one night a week between September and May to learn first-hand what business is all about.

Each JA company is composed of 15 to 25 members called achievers who, under the guidance of adult advisers from business and industry, forms its own board of directors, work force and sales staff.

The young people elect officers and decide on a product or service to sell. Eighty-five per cent of the companies are manufacturing firms, producing items ranging from boat lights to jewelry. Some choose to learn about services such as publishing, banking, and accounting.

The achievers experience a company's operation from start to finish, giving the members a "real world" awareness of the business system and an opportunity to learn practical fundamentals of the American business system.

In loving memory of my sister, JACKIE GATTUNG, January 8, 1975. Remembrance is a golden chain Death tries to break but all in vain:

To have, to love, and then to part
Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart.
The years may wipe out many things,
But this we wipe out never—
The memory of those happy days
When we were all together.
There is a link death cannot sever.
Love and remembrance last forever.

Cold weather and deep snow bring hazards to city and farm residents alike, including accidents, fires, and over-exertion from shoveling snow.

Farmers, especially livestock producers, have the problems of caring for livestock as well as family needs.

They also may have to deal with frozen pipes, costly water damage, and malfunction of sensitive equipment controls if fuel isn't available to keep building temperatures above 32 degrees or if heating equipment fails.

Be careful if you use temporary heating equipment to help conserve fuel. All temporary heaters, except electric heaters, use oxygen and can be lethal if used in a confined space.

Do not leave fuel oil or other flame-type space heaters unattended, particularly where they may be tipped over. Make certain that the heater has an automatic shutoff which activates when the unit is tipped over.

Do not try to thaw frozen pipes with a blow torch or open flame of any kind. To be safe, either wrap the pipe in cloth and pour on hot water or wrap it with an approved electrical-heating cable.

Have heating systems checked and adjusted to be sure they are functioning as efficiently as possible to conserve available fuel. Pay particular attention to controls and other safety devices.

Check fire extinguishers to be sure they are fully charged and operable. Be sure that water extinguishers or pump tanks are placed in convenient areas not subject to freezing.

Electrically-heated livestock waterers generally provide a safe supply of ice-free water to livestock during the winter months. However, a substantial number of animals are electrocuted by these waterers each year.

A high percentage of the electrocutions are caused by deteriorated wiring within the waterer housing as a result of moisture accumulations, by defective or deficient heating assembly probably from years of usage, or by improper wiring or grounding when the unit was installed.

Servicing procedures to assure safe operation of electrical water heaters include the following:

First, disconnect the electric power source to the waterer. Then remove side panels and allow area under the waterer to dry.

Check wiring insulation and replace it with moisture-resistant wire (type U.F.) if it has deteriorated.

Check all wiring from switch to heating element and replace or repair as necessary. Be sure the ground wire is securely fastened to the frame of the waterer and that the ground wire is also attached to the neutral bar in the fuse cabinet.

Check to determine whether the thermostat operates properly. If faulty, replace it. Check to be sure the bowl is not electrically charged when the fuse is replaced and the switch is placed in the on position. Use an ohmmeter or test lamp to avoid getting an electrical shock.

A contractor would not start a new building without a detailed blueprint. And a dairyman cannot successfully build a high-producing dairy herd without production records. If your herd is not on a record program, now is the best time to start.

Illinois dairy herds who are on a production record program produce an average of about 3,000 pounds of milk more per cow per year than herds operating without the benefit of such records.

With milk selling at $9 per hundred pounds, the extra milk obtained in these herds totals a gross amount of about $270 more in annual income per cow.

The information provided by the production records helped these dairymen increase their production by carrying out a sound breeding program, a better feeding program, and a more effective culling program so the lower-producing cows are eliminated from their herds. Contact our Extension office for more information on the dairy production record program.

Charge against box board firm

The Illinois Pollution Control Board has charged the Alton Box Board Company with discharging untreated mill wastewater directly into an impoundment area — and for not constructing and operating its facilities so as to minimize violations of Pollution Control Board standards.

Alton Box Board operates a paperboard mill in Alton near the Mississippi River.

Effluent from a mill process wastewater discharge should flow, via a pipeline, directly into the Mississippi rather than being discharged into the impoundment area, according to LeVerne Hudson, manager of the Division of Water Pollution Control, Illinois EPA.

"The impoundment area has been a continuous pollution problem since 1972 because of hydrogen sulfide fumes."

"Also, Alton Box Board has not constructed and operated its mill wastewater treatment facilities in order to minimize violations during unforeseen problems, such as power failure, equipment failure or maintenance," Hudson alleged.

"The company has a history of litigation before the PCB dating back to May 25, 1972. The current charge before the PCB is based on agency observations during this past July as well as Alton's monitoring reports showing discharge into the impoundment area.

"We are asking the board to order the company to comply with environmental regulations by developing and implementing plans for a backup system to alleviate the problem. We are also asking for a monetary penalty of up to $10,000 for the alleged violations and up to $1,000 for each day the violation continues," Hudson concluded.

The office of the Illinois attorney general will serve as the EPA counsel.

Tax forms aid shared revenue distribution

Individual Internal Revenue Service (IRS) taxpayer returns for 1975 include questions on residence intended to provide an accurate basis for equitable distribution of general revenue sharing funds.

According to the Office of Revenue Sharing (ORS) of the U. S. Treasury Department, such funds are returned by the federal government to state and local general-purpose governments under terms of the federal revenue sharing law. The amount each government receives is based, in part, on population and per capita income estimates made by the Bureau of the Census, U. S. Department of Commerce.

The new questions on the income tax form are designed to identify the taxpayer's legal residence, which may differ from his or her mailing address.

Authority to ask the new questions is provided in Section 6017A of the Internal Revenue Code.

The information from the residence questions will be used by the Bureau of the Census to make biennial population and per capita income estimates needed to insure that states and communities receive the amounts of general revenue sharing funds to which they are entitled.

For this reason, all taxpayers are being urged to provide the information as an assistance to their states and communities. The Internal Revenue Code authorizes a fine to be imposed for failure to provide the residence data, unless reasonable cause is shown for such failure.

Information provided to the Census Bureau, under law, can be published as statistical totals only, and no information about a person or individual firm may be disclosed to any person, institution or government agency. The law of confidentiality under which the Bureau operates applies also to the residence data to be collected on IRS returns.

The new questions are labeled A, B, C and D, and the wording of each follows:

Question A - In what city, town, village, etc. do you live?

Question B - Do you live within the legal limits of the city, town, etc.?

Question C - In what county and state do you live?

Question D - In what township do you live?

In regard to Questions A and B, directions on the form explain that every municipality has defined legal limits.

If the area where you live is unincorporated, or is outside the legal limits of the place named in Question A, check "No" to Question B. If you are not sure whether you live within the legal limits, check "Don't Know" to Question B, the IRS suggests.

Question D, the form also explains, applies only to townships or equivalent areas in New England, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

Taxpayers who have difficulty in answering the residence questions are being instructed to seek assistance from local level government officials, or to write the Bureau of the Census, Residence Question, Washington, D. C. 20233 - or to call collect at 812-948-2111 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. (Eastern standard time) Monday through Friday 9 to 4 Central time).

Replacement sought for void coupon

Mike Bledsoe, president of the Granite City Jaycees, today announced that efforts to find alternate sources to replace the coupons in the Jaycees' Gift Certificate booklet, credited to W. T. Grant Co., have been unsuccessful.

The Gift Certificate booklets, sold by the Jaycees earlier this year as a special fund raising program, contained coupons for the Bradford House restaurant, formerly located in the Grant City store, and for other items offered by the business firm.

Since the company has declared bankruptcy, the contract made between the Jaycees and W. T. Grant Co. is regulated under law, Bledsoe said.

Acceptance of the program by local merchants has been good, except in one instance about which several complaints have been received, the Jaycees officer said.

Funds raised from the sale of the Gift Certificate booklets will enable the young men's service club to finance several projects of benefit to youth and the community as a whole throughout the year, Bledsoe noted.

Ways to avoid fireplace injuries

By CATHERINE R. MAUCK
Madison County Extension
Adviser-Home Economics

Fireplace fires demand special care. Then, they're both friendly and safe. According to the U. S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, fireplaces are the cause of more than 6,000 emergency-room injuries each year. The most serious injuries are burns and the majority of the victims are children.

Most fireplace accidents are caused by laxity and carelessness on the part of the fireplace owners. The use of flammable liquids to rekindle the flame, ignition of clothing from the open flames, sparks landing on nearby flammable materials, and carbon monoxide poisoning caused by using the wrong fuels and improper ventilation are accidents that occur most frequently.

Explosive liquids such as gasoline should never be used to re-light a flame. Materials such as coal, charcoal, or styrofoam packaging can produce deadly quantities of carbon monoxide plus other gases when used in an open fireplace. Anything that burns is capable of producing gas that can explode, so proper venting is essential for safety.

Suitable screens or glass should be placed in front of all fireplaces to minimize the danger from sparks. The placement of spark arrestors over the outside opening of the chimney will reduce the chance of sparks spreading across your roof and to nearby buildings. Smoke trouble may occur if the fire is not properly laid. Wood should be criss-crossed and not jammed tightly together. Lighting paper near the back wall and near the top of the kindling will prevent the cold flue air from pushing smoke out into the room.

A fire in the chimney is another possibility when wood resins and coal tar build up inside the flue. As a safety precaution, check fireplaces regularly to determine that vents and chimneys are working properly.

Never vent any other kind of heating device into a fireplace chimney. Don't burn coal or wood in a gas fireplace; the flue won't stand the heat.

Other safety precautions include a regular chimney cleaning schedule and keeping children under close watch when there is an open flame near. A fascination for all ages, fire is a special temptation for a small child.

Be sure all ashes are cooled before disposing of them, and make certain that your fire has completely extinguished before leaving the house or going to bed.

Explorers in holiday games

Police Explorer Post 10-33, sponsored by the Granite City Police Department, defeated Nursing Explorer Post 9, sponsored by St. Elizabeth Hospital, in four out of five volleyball games played during the holidays in the Sacred Heart school gymnasium.

"We had to beat them one game just to keep them in their place," a spokesman for the young future nurses said. "They seemed to enjoy winning so much we let them win the first four games."

After the series of games, the young Explorers held a song fest and had refreshments.

2 hurt in fight

Two Missouri young men who were injured during a disturbance at the Grainery, a nightclub in Edwardsville, were brought by ambulance to St. Elizabeth Hospital Monday.

Mark Meyer, 18, Fordson, Mo., suffered contusions and abrasions to his forehead and left hand and was transferred to St. Joseph's Hospital, St. Charles, Mo.

Jack Fillman, 19, Manchester, Mo., suffered a cut to his chin and bruises to his cheek and an eye and was released after treatment.

The scripture simply states that the people faint and were as sheep without a shepherd. They had no shepherd to lead them. They struggled to solve their own problems and failed, and failure caused fainting or despair. Everyone has problems, but you're really on bottom when you give up.

Jesus says, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." If you believe in Him, you may receive from Him. Why not believe TODAY?

Miss Alice Lynn Whaley, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Whaley, 2504 Cleveland Blvd., became the bride of Paul Charles Wuebbs, a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Wuebbs, 232 E. Kentucky St., Trenton, Ill., on Dec. 12 at SS Peter and Paul Catholic Church, Collinsville.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride chose a full-length gown, lavishly accented with lace motifs on the A-line skirt and chapel train. Lace appliques formed the high neckline, traced the sheer yoke and were repeated on the long, tapered sleeves.

Her bouffant veil of bridal illusion was bordered in scalloped lace and secured to a lace headpiece. She carried long stemmed red roses, intermingled with holly and greenery and tied with red velvet streamers.

Matron of honor Mrs. Chris Shanahan wore a long empire-style gown of burgundy velvet fashioned with a scoop neckline and long sleeves, trimmed with lace. She wore a velvet bow in her hair and held a bouquet of pink carnations, holly and greenery festooned with pink velvet ribbons.

Greg Sizal attended the groom as best man. Michael Whaley and Gary Wuebbs, brothers of the bride couple, served as ushers.

Guests were received at a reception given at Augustine's Restaurant, Belleville. The groom's parents hosted a dinner at Dohack's Restaurant, Fairview Heights, on the evening prior to the wedding.

Yet for only 22¢ or less you can make a Long Distance call to any other state in the United States (except Alaska and Hawaii) with our new one-minute weekend rate. That's 22¢ or less for the first minute. 16¢ or less for each additional minute.

And all you have to do is dial direct and call on the weekend before 5 p.m. Sunday.

(9) "Building drain - sanitary" - A building drain which conveys sanitary or industrial sewage.

(10) "Building drain - storm" - A building drain which conveys storm water or clean water drainage, but not sanitary or industrial sewage.

(11) "Normal domestic sewage" shall mean the wastes from industrial, manufacturing processes, trade, or business as distinct from sanitary sewage.

(13) "Properly shredded garbage" shall mean the wastes from the preparation, cooking, and dispensing of food that have been shredded to such a degree that all particles will be carried freely under the flow conditions normally prevailing in public sewers, with no particle greater than one-half (1/2) inch in any dimension.

(20) "If any waters or wastes are discharged, or are proposed to be discharged, to the public sewers, which waters contain the substances or possess the characteristics enumerated in Section 5(d) of this Section, and which in the judgment of the Superintendent may have a deleterious effect upon the sewage works, processes, equipment, or receiving waters, the Superintendent may require the owner to take such action as may be necessary to prevent such a hazard to life or constitute a public nuisance, the Superintendent may do one or any combination of the following:

(a) Require the owner to take the added cost of handling and treating the wastes not covered by existing taxes or sewer charges under the provisions of Section 5(j) of this Section.

Sacred Heart to honor Rev. Enright

MISS BECKY HALBROOK, whose engagement to Army Private Kerry Johnson is being announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Halbrook, 3272 Edgewood Ave. A March 20 wedding is planned.

Johnson-Halbrook betrothal

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Halbrook, 3272 Edgewood Ave., are announcing the engagement and plans for a March wedding of their daughter, Miss Becky Halbrook, and Army Private Kerry Johnson.

Parents of the groom-elect, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Johnson, reside at 4557 Walter Ave.

Plans are being completed by the engaged couple for a March 20 wedding at Trinity United Methodist Church.

Both young people graduated from Granite City High School in 1973. Miss Halbrook is a junior student at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, where she is majoring in elementary and special education and learning disabilities. She is employed on a part-time basis as cashier at Central Hardware store and as receptionist for Dr. Frank Diomedea.

Pvt. Johnson is now training in accounting at Fort Benjamin Harris, Ind.

CHRISTIAN WOMEN'S JANUARY LUNCHEON

Home sewn fashions will be a special feature at the Southern Illinois Christian Women's Club luncheon at 11:45 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 14, at Fischer's Restaurant, Belleville. It was announced by Dorothy Perkins, club publicity chairman.

Reservations, costing $2.50 each, may be made by calling Jan Krause at 235-3217.

Father Joseph A. Enright, retired pastor of Sacred Heart Church, will celebrate his 50th anniversary of ordination to the priesthood on Sunday at Sacred Heart Church.

The concelebrated mass, in which the Most Rev. Joseph A. McNicholas, Bishop of Springfield, will participate, will be offered at 4 p.m. at the church.

A public reception for Father Enright will be held from 2:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. in the school auditorium. Everyone is invited to attend the mass and the reception. A dinner for Father Enright, Bishop McNicholas and visiting clergy will follow the service.

Father Enright was born in Chicago on April 27, 1900. After attending Quigley Seminary there, he was ordained in Washington, D. C., on Dec. 19, 1925, by Bishop Thomas Shahan. He attended Catholic University in Washington, D. C., from that time until appointed on June 6, 1928, as the first assistant pastor of Blessed Sacrament Church, Springfield. His name appears on the cornerstone of that church.

Subsequently, he was appointed chaplain of St. Joseph's Home, Springfield, on Sept. 13, 1930, and was named superintendent of the Catholic Children's Home, Alton, during the period 1932 to 1947.

Appointments as chaplain, St. Joseph's Hospital, Highland; pastor of St. James Church, St. Jacob; and pastor of St. Mary's in Brussels, Ill., followed.

On May 26, 1964, Bishop William A. O'Connor appointed Father Enright pastor of Sacred Heart Church after the death of its founder and Father Enright's friend, the Rt. Rev. Magr. Michael Costello. At that time, Sacred Heart was the third largest church in the Springfield Diocese.

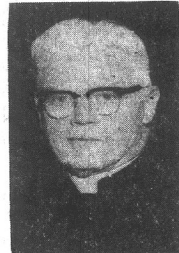

Shortly after his arrival, the pending transfer of over one-third of the church's families to the newly-established St. Margaret Mary Alacoque parish took place on July 3, 1964.

Father Enright retired as pastor of Sacred Heart Church on Sept. 1, 1974. Prior to his retirement he formed a steering committee to create a parish council and the Catholic Youth Organization at Sacred Heart.

The Rev. Enright presently is residing in the company of other retired priests at The Little Sisters of the Poor, 3225 North Florissant Ave., St. Louis. A concelebrated mass in his honor, attended by 25 priests, his sisters from Chicago, religious sisters and laity, was held there in the chapel on Dec. 11.

Father James P. Hill, pastor of Sacred Heart Church, is asking persons unable to attend the mass and reception who wish to remember Father Enright on his anniversary to send their expressions either directly to Father Enright's St. Louis address or forward them to the Sacred Heart Rectory for delivery to the retired pastor.

The Argosy
Model FU475

Come in and let us demonstrate RCA's newest electronic marvel... an amazing new portable TV that "thinks in color!" This compact 19" diagonal model, in today's most popular screen size, features RCA's Super AccuFilter black matrix picture tube with filtered vertical color phosphor strips for sharp, clear pictures with more vivid colors... plus all the great features of RCA's new ColorTrak System. Far and away the most automatic TV ever from RCA. Come in and see it in action!

All new chassis offers reliability of 100% acid state, plus improved circuitry to enhance picture brightness.
• RCA Super AccuFilter black matrix picture tube reduces light reflection. Colors stand out with lifelike clarity.
• Automatic contrast/color
"tracking" maintains a stable color picture balance from scene to scene and channel to channel.
• Picture brightness automatically adjusts to assure best possible viewing in any room light.
• Automatic color control "thinks in color" by holding flesh tones to color/tint settings you select.

Simulated TV reception.

"Helping You Change Things For The Better"

GOOD NEWS for folks who have no pension plan!

Individual Retirement Accounts

The new Pension Reform Act allows millions of Americans, who have not had the benefits of an employer or union sponsored pension plan, to set aside Tax-Free dollars for their retirement. The Individual Retirement Account (IRA) is an important part of the new Act.

The big tax-savings in the IRA plan are available to you if you are not now actively participating in a tax-qualified pension plan. And working for a company that has a pension plan does not disqualify you until you are actually included in the company's plan.

The IRA plan is open to both full-time and part-time employees, including a spouse working full or part time, students with part time jobs, and self employed individuals not covered by the Keogh plan.

Come in, write, or phone 452-1313. Ask for Larry Gipe or Harley Davis. They'll be glad to answer all your questions and you'll get informed advice in putting this plan to work to your greatest advantage. Keep in mind that the sooner you start, the earlier your savings begin to earn and grow."
